KAUFMAN FIGHTING FOR THE CHAMPIONSHIP

COOK HOLDS CONFIDENCE

Danes Confer High Honor on Explorer, Despite Doubts Cast Upon His Discovery.

PORT AMOUR, via Quebec, Sept. 9.—At 8 o'clock to-day Peary's ship Roosevelt was still at Battle Harbor. The weather is fine along the coast.

Cook Honored by Degree.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 9.—In the presence of King Frederick, the Queen, the Danish Crown Prince and other distinguished members of the royal family, the degree of an honorary doctor of science was conferred upon D. Frederick A. Cook at the Royal Danish University to-day. Despite the doubts which have been cast over the statements of the American Arctic explorer the occasion was one of great enthusiasm.

When the diploma was conferred upon him there was a burst of handclapping in which the distinguished scientists among the spectators joined. Dr. Cook spoke a few words, thanking the university for the honor conferred upon him and declaring that he would strive to live up to the high standard which the honor entailed.

Cook Off for Home To-morrow.

Late to-day the announcement came from Dr. Cook that he would leave here to-morrow afternoon for Christiania, where he will embark for New York direct, arriving there September 20.

A serious hitch took place in the plans of Dr. Cook to substantiate his polar story to-day, when it was found that no ship is available upon which to send an expedition for the two Eskimos who accompanied him in his polar dash. It is improbable now that Cook can carry out his plan of sending Captain Sverdrup into the North.

Captain Rasmussen is now on route from Cape York to Copenhagen, after having investigated a part of Cook's claims. It is reported from the North that he has the greatest faith in Dr. Cook's story, which was supported by statements made to Rasmussen by Cook's own Eskimos.

Captain Rasmussen is a man of high standing, and his arrival early in October is awaited with keen interest and impatience. It is believed that he has information bearing on Cook's story which will be enlightening and corroborative.

Preliminary accounts of his dash to the North Pole, published to-day by Commander Peary, strengthen the claims of his rival, Dr. Cook. They show that much of the skepticism as to Dr. Cook's feat, based upon the rapidity of Cook's trip and other points in his narrative, would apply to Peary even more than to Cook. Peary, according to his own story, made the journey in a much shorter time than Cook, both going and returning, though his average on the ice was somewhat less per day.

3 TRAPPED BY CAVE-IN; ONE MAY DIE

Three employes of the Cambridge sewer department were buried in a ditch twenty feet deep under a mass of earth and shoring timbers shortly before noon to-day at Norris street and Massachusetts avenue. One is expected to die at the Cambridge Hospital. Two other two were taken to their homes. A half-dozen other laborers had close calls for their lives.

Everett Britt, sixty years of age, of Cambridge street, East Cambridge, was fatally injured. He was caught between the timbers and crushed by the mass of earth. One leg and three ribs were broken.

The others injured were:

John Murphy of No. 13 Sargent street, North Cambridge, nearly suffocated by earth.

Henry C. Knott of No. 27 Hasling street, Cambridgeport, slightly bruised, although he was buried eighteen feet deep for an hour.

Policemen were called out and some one rang in a fire alarm, which brought a chemical, a hook and ladder and two engines with their crew to the scene.

The sewer department had about fifty men at work digging a deep trench for piping. On account of the sandy nature of the soil the trench had been carefully shored up, but one of these props gave way under the tremendous pressure.

Britt, Murphy and Knott were caught in a trap. Britt was crushed and buried about six feet below the surface and Murphy two or three feet farther down. Knott was caught at the bottom of the trench and buried to his neck. The boards and cross supports must have fallen about him so as to protect him. For an hour he managed to talk with his rescuers.

JOHNSON-KAUFMAN WAITING FOR GONG

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—Betting on the result of the Johnson-Kaufman fight is remarkably light. Johnson's backers are still offering odds of 10 to 4 that the champion will get the better of the contest, but with few takers. Kaufman's friends are betting 2 to 1 that Kaufman will last the full ten rounds, and a number of small wagers have been made along this line. One Kaufman man offered to bet $50 against $100 that Johnson would not last ten rounds, and this was quickly snapped up.

Johnson will arrive in the city to-day about the noon hour and will go direct to the arena. Kaufman will remain at Millett's until 1 o'clock and will then make his way to Coffroth's fighting pavilion in company of his handlers.

Roscoe Taylor and Tommy McCarthy, who are to appear in a preliminary of fifteen rounds, will enter the ring at 2 o'clock. Johnson and Kaufman are expected to be in their corners very shortly after 3 and if the Taylor-McCarthy bout comes to an end in ten rounds it is likely that Johnson and Kaufman will begin fighting before 3.

Light work was the rule at both camps yesterday. Kaufman went out on the road and tried his hand at sprinting several times. In the afternoon he went in for a short spell of shadow boxing. Johnson's program was practically the same.

Kaufman is mighty glad that to-day is battle day. They say Al has listened to all sorts of torture while harkening to advice as to how he should fight Johnson—in fact, more than he expects to endure when he faces the champion in the ring. Al is a popular fellow, and has a large following. He is gentle mannered outside the ropes, and a good listener. His friends have taken advantage of this, and Al has been rationally advised to go at Johnson like a steam engine; to stay away from Johnson; to hold back for five rounds and to fight the next five at breakneck speed.

These are only a few of the sure guides to success that Al has had his attention drawn to. It is said he has promised to lose six different ways, but out of all the confusion good may come. When he gets away from his well wishers and has merely Jr Johnson's dark presence to engage his attention he will no doubt fight his own way.

If Johnson makes a close fight Kaufman most of necessity follows suit for what Al does not know about slidestepping and backing away would form an admirable treatise on the manly art. And the closer and faster fighting the better Kaufman's prospects would appear. The chances of landing a wallop are much better when the gloves are flying continuously at short range, and Kaufman has said he believes he can turn the tide with one good blow.

A great deal depends, of course, upon the way Johnson fights and unless the champion wishes to invite rhubarb he will infuse action into his work. He informed Coffroth several days ago that he would forfeit the sum set aside for his training expenses if he failed to knock out Kaufman in nine rounds. This certainly looks as if Jack intended going at his man.

Then again, where hurricane fighting is the order of the day the thing may merge into a question of condition. In such case Kaufman, who has not been tried on much as Johnson during the past half year, may display more stamina than his clever opponent.

These are possibilities, of course, as stated them. There are Johnson's 200 pounds of fighting brawn and Johnson's proven cleverness, which are stubborn facts.

HARRIMAN DEATH RUMOR HITS MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Wall Street heard at 1 o'clock this afternoon that E. H. Harriman was dead, and stock prices fell off considerably in consequence, notably Union Pacific, the premier Harriman property.

Every possible means to obtain either confirmation or denial from an authoritative source met with failure for a time, and uncertainty reigned throughout the great financial centre.

All day long rumor had succeeded rumor that the financier had breathed his last. At 1 o'clock this morning the mysterious messages began to fly about, and through out the day one would scarcely be dispossed of by a denial from the Union Pacific officer or from the home of the stricken magnate when another would come in its stead.

Death a Question of Hours.

The report from the bedside was most meagre, and while evidently phrased as hopefully as possible, the impression given to the public and the general public was that at the best Mr. Harriman's death was but a question of hours. It was pointed out in the street that a full man like Harriman, whose vitality had been sapped by a year's illness, could not long be sustained by the purely artificial means, which alone was said to have kept the spark of life aglow for the past forty-eight hours. Even oxygen has its limitations, and with little or no foundation to build on, it must ultimately fail of its purpose.

Reports from the army of newspaper men stationed around the Harriman home at Arden were to the effect that there was no change in the patient's condition so far as could be determined from the outside. Precautions to guard all the approaches to the great mansion from intrusion by newspaper men and all others were redoubled to-day. Only a brief bulletin was given out by Dr. Lyle early in the day, saying that Harriman's condition was unchanged.

Effect on Stock Market.

The watch on the house was maintained unceasingly, however, as it was felt by the newspaper men as well as by the Wall Street operators that if Mr. Harriman should die during the day news of it undoubtedly would be suppressed until after the close of the stock market.

With the announcement of his death coming after 2 p. m., the interested financiers would have opportunity to arrange and protect those issues made most liable to attack before the opening to-morrow, while a sudden announcement of the news during trading hours undoubtedly would be the signal for wild trading and a possible serious upset of prices for the time being.

Dr. Lyle, when reached by phone at 1:45 o'clock at the Harriman home, positively denied reports circulated in Wall Street and outside going that Mr. Harriman was dead. Asked if he would say any thing more he replied that he would issue another bulletin late in the afternoon.

"You cannot deny the reports of his death too strongly," Dr. Lyle said.

A SECRET ABOUT ETHEL BARRYMORE

As great a favorite as is Ethel Barrymore in Boston, where she was married to Russel G. Colt of Providence, her many friends will receive with pleasing satisfaction the news that his year's season will be curtailed because of a beautiful but ill-fated addition to the family. The hope that has lent additional charm to the young matron, according to Leander Richardson, than whom there is no better report for more entertaining writer on theatrical topics in New York. Miss Barrymore sat in a box at the Criterion Theatre, New York, the other evening, at the initial production of the comedy-drama "The Fine Lieutenant with her uncle, John Drew, and Mr. Richardson, writing in the Review, a bright, new dramatic weekly, says: "Drew didn't look old enough to be a grand-uncle and when congratulated by his friends upon his appearance declared that he was gilding more youth, feel every day, despite his coming 'great.'"

SMALLPOX HOLDS UP ROMANIC

The White Star liner Romanic, arriving from the Mediterranean, was held up at quarantine for 36 hours to-day while surgeons re-vaccinated 1,217 steerage passengers on account of the discovery of two smallpox cases among the immigrants.

All the steerage passengers had been vaccinated at Naples by the port physician of that city. But the discovery of smallpox among them caused Port Physician Carson of this port to order them all vaccinated over again.

It took five hours for Dr. Carson and Dr. P. de Blasio, the Romanic's surgeon, to snatch 1,217 arms with virus points. They had no trouble with the Italians, who were stood up in line with bared arms, so that the task of the two doctors could be expedited as much as possible.

The two smallpox patients were little Italian girls, who came over with their father mother and two other children. The whole family was removed to the local quarantine station at to allonque's Island. An immigrant has been afflicted with measles was also sent to quarantine.

There were 1,956 saloon passengers and 170 in the second cabin, making a total of 1,481 passengers. The saloon and second cabin passengers wondered at the unusual delay at quarantine. When word flew about that smallpox had been discovered there was some natural uneasiness among the passengers of the saloon and second cabin. But they were assured that there was no danger of contagion and that the two smallpox patients and their relatives had been isolated since the cases were first noticed by Dr. de Blasio on the voyage over.

"I never knew that I had come across this family of six in the steerage. I noticed that two of the children, girls, had a slight rash on their bodies.

"I diagnosed their ailment at first as chicken pox. I had the whole family isolated. To-day I had the children have a slight attack of small-pox. The children and the other four members of the family have been sent over to the quarantine station on Hoffman's Island. A boy with the measles was sent over there, too.

"Although the port physician at Naples vaccinated all the steerage passengers before the Romanic sailed, they were all re-vaccinated to-day. That was the reason we were detained an hour in quarantine."

The Romanic arrived at quarantine at 7 a. m. and was released at 1 p. m. in Hamilton at 8. She did not get up to the dock till 1 p. m.

CAPTURES MAN AT GUN POINT

Patrolman James J. Greene of East Boston early to-day captured a man in the drug store of Clark & Mahoney, corner of Prescott and Bennington streets. When the man was discovered he fled upstairs in the building. When the officer reached the third floor he drew his pistol and came face to face with the man, who said, "You've got me."

Neighbors told the officer that there were three more men on the roof. He telephoned for assistance and discharged his revolver, which attracted the attention of James H. Jacobs. Both then conducted an investigation, but could not find the men. They did find a number of articles taken from the drug store.

The man said he was William A. Hewitt of Kirkhave. He said he had just come from Philadelphia, where he was released from jail two weeks ago. In the East Boston court he was held in $1,200 for the Grand Jury on the charge of breaking and entering and larceny.

KING WITH ZEPPELIN IN LONG FLIGHT

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Sept. 9.—The King of Saxony was a passenger with Count Zeppelin in the latter's dirigible balloon to-day, when a successful flight of one hour and twenty-five minutes was made.

The King was delighted with the novel experience, and warmly congratulated Count Zeppelin upon his achievements in the aerial fields.

CURTISS MAKES GOOD TEST FLIGHT IN BRESCIA MEET

BRESCIA, Italy, Sept. 9.—M. Bierlot, who is here for the aviation tournament, announced to-day that he would not be able to go to America to fly, on account of business engagements, which will keep him in France for a year.

Glenn M. Curtiss, the American, made a fine test flight to-day of one milometer. He did not complete the entire starting trial and flew merely to avoid being penalized for the Brescia prize.

WRIGHT MAKES SEVERAL FLIGHTS OVER TEMPLEHOF

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—While the German Crown Prince and Princess looked on to-day, Orville Wright, the American aviator, made several flights above the Templehof parade grounds, carrying his first German pupil, Captain Engelhardt, of the Imperial navy. After the exhibition the Crown Prince rushed forward, and, clasping the aviator by the hand, congratulated him upon his success.

AMERICAN LEAGUE GROUNDS, Washington, Sept. 9.—The Red Sox wound up their stay here to-day, when they lined up against the Senators. It was the last game of the year for the Speed Boys in this city.

President Taylor of the Boston team had another conference with President Noyes of the Washington club to-day, with a view of securing Pitcher Smith, but neither president would tell the newspaper men what progress, if any, has been made in the negotiations.

The Red Sox will leave to-night for Philadelphia, where they play Friday and Saturday. They will return home on Saturday night on the train, opening up again on the home grounds, where they will stay for the rest of the season.

More AMERICANS are read in the homes in Boston that any other paper.

GIRLS FLEE IN FEAR OF FIRE

Scores of girls employed in the building at No. 25 Winter street, had a bad scare this afternoon and rushed to the street before a fire in the fifth floor.

The fire started on the fifth floor.

It is believed that the fire was the result of a cigarette stub. The smoke spread to the floors below, where various schools were in session. Miss Evelyn Pulsifer, No. 6 E. Friar street, and Miss Hosmer were instrumental in caring for the excited people.

FEW PUPILS DENIED SEATS

Practically every child in Boston was given a seat in the public schools to-day, according to Superintendent Brooks. Reports were received from the various school districts at noon, all of which showed that the overcrowding of yesterday had been practically eliminated.

The Phillips School in the West End was still overcrowded to-day, but the extra pupils are being transferred to other schools. By to-morrow it is expected that not one in the entire city will be without a seat. The seats and desks for the three rooms of the Dillaway School have arrived and will be set up immediately.

BIG DINNER TALK KEEPS TAFT BUSY

BEVERLY, Sept. 9.—President Taft will not express any opinion on the controversy between the Department of the Interior and the Bureau of Forestry of the Department of Agriculture until he has seen and talked with Chief Forester Pinchot. He has heard Secretary Ballinger's version from the viewpoint of the Department of the Interior and will think it over. Secretary Ballinger has returned to Washington. He probably will meet the President again at Seattle the 29th.

After approving about 100 census selections made by Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel and Census Director Durand, the President yet has about 100 nominations to pass upon. The matter of these appointments was the subject of long conference with Messrs. Nagel and Durand. The remaining appointments are to go to the big cities, where the supervisorships are lucrative.

Between the visits of Government officials the President is "doping out" his speech for the Boston Chamber of Commerce dinner next Tuesday evening and those that he will make on his trip through the West.

JUDGES WILL ACT ON DEER ISLAND

Judge Harris of the Superior Criminal Court and Hubert Pope, secretary of Penal Institutions Commissioner Skinner, conferred to-day over the congested condition of the House of Correction at Deer Island. Judge Harris said he would take up the matter with Chief Justice Aiken and the other members of the Superior Court bench and put forth every effort to relieve the present condition. Commissioner Skinner has conferred with Chief Justice Bolster of the lower court, and as a result of this conference it is understood that fewer commitments of drunks will be made to Deer Island and more will be sent to the State Farm at Bridgewater.

STATE ST. FIRM IN BANKRUPTCY

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in the United States Court today against Arthur J. Stewart and George R. Yates, State street stock brokers, doing business under the firm name of Stewart & Yates. The petitioning creditors are John Witherington, $587; George K. Keller, $3,092; and Alfred S. Hook, $2,317.61. The petitioners allege that these sums are due them on account of stock transactions.

CLUBBED WITH HIS OWN NIGHT STICK

Coast Artilleryman John R. O'Reilly, a strapping 225-pound football player, who is the star at Fort Revere, where he is stationed, will miss one month's practice because he used his football tactics on Patrolman Rowe of Lynn and necessitated four stitches to be taken in the officer's head.

"One month in the Salem Jail," said Judge Lummus as he glanced at the patrolman's head, swathed in bandages.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 9.—The thirty-second biennial convention of the general council of the Evangelical Lutheran church in North America opened to-day in Salem church.

TAFT GIVES SONDER CUP TO JOYETTE

BEVERLY, Sept. 9.—Standing upon the deck of the U. S. S. Mayflower and surrounded by the brilliantly attired diplomats of half a dozen nations, several members of his cabinet and distinguished North Shore colonists, President Taft to-day presented the Taft cup to the American winner of the ocean-racer class races.

The yachtsmen who manned the three American boats, Joyette, Ellen and Wolf, and the crews of the German yachts, Heliwela, Schund and Marguerite, were drawn up in front of him. The President said he was pleased to be able to reward his own countrymen, and also expressed his appreciation of the Germans as yachtsmen and as a nation. He hoped that the Germans would try again, and laid stress on the value of such contests in promoting international amity.

The Joyette, commanded by W. H. Childs, received the Taft cup. After the presentation and short addresses by the President and Commodore W. B. Thomas of the Eastern Yacht Club, a buffet lunch was served.

The Mayflower was brought from Boston for the occasion, and was anchored in Beverly harbor. The guests included members of the German, French, Italian, Chilian, Cuban, Brazilian, Austrian and Siamese legations, Chilian Charge Nagel, Ballinger and Meyer, Colonel W. B. Sohier, R. B. Teal, Bryce A. Allen, the Mayors of Beverly and Gloucester, the chairmen of the selectmen of Manchester and Marblehead, Congressman Gardner and Al. Pittum, proprietor of the Beverly Times.

HAD PREMONITION OF WIFE'S DEATH

When Dr. Charles L. Bullock, a dentist, residing at the Hotel Cambridge, Cambridge, left his Summer home at Lake Sunapee, N. H., he experienced the fear that things were not well at his home.

When he completed the journey he was shocked to find crepe hanging from the door leading to his apartments. Mrs. Bullock had died a few hours before.

When Mrs. Bullock retired she appeared to be in the best of health, but at midnight called a maid, to whom she complained of illness. She died in a few minutes.

POET'S WILL HELPS NEPHEW IN MAINE

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—An accounting of the will of Bloodgood H. Cutter, the farmer poet, and one of the "Unnoticed" who sailed with Mark Watts on the Quaker City, has been filed with the Surrogate of Nassau County. The accounting places the value of the Cutter estate at $900,662. A favorite nephew, John Cutter of Bowdoinham, Me., received the Cutter farm at Little Neck, which has been sold for $280,000 since Mr. Cutter's death.

SUPPER NOT READY, MAN KILLS HIMSELF

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Sept. 9.—Returning home and finding the supper table bare, William J. Prouty, aged thirty-seven years, a machinist, quarreled with his wife, fired one shot at her, which missed, and then committed suicide by shooting himself in the head.

His son, aged fifteen years, attempted to prevent his father's act, but was unsuccessful.

Miguel's Wedding Gift of Rare Jewels.

LONDON—The wedding gift of Prince Miguel of Braganza to his bride-elect, Miss Anita Stewart, is a magnificent cluster of diamonds and sapphires in the shape of a feather. It has been a family treasure of the royal house of Austria for more than two centuries. Its last owner was the Empress Elizabeth, who bequeathed it to Prince Miguel. Miss Stewart will wear it on her wedding day with a clasp of orange blossoms in her hair. Prince Miguel has declared that he will never assume any title which his wife cannot equally claim, after the wedding the couple will be known in Vienna as the Duke and Duchess of Vizer.

Gompers Talks on Strikes.

LONDON—Samuel Gompers delivered an address before the Trades Union Congress in Ipswich, in the course of which he declared that the trades union movement was composed of elements of the greatest constructive statesmanship the world had ever seen. He said that while in every country they ought to do their level best to avoid or evade strikes, yet the right to strike and the power to strike constituted a great economic and industrial power which it was their duty to keep.

To Bring Eleanor Beattie Back.

LONDON—Adelbert T. Hoff of New York, who is wanted in that city on charges of grand larceny and forgery, has been committed for extradition and will leave for New York Sept. 25. The same officer who takes Hoff will have in his custody also Eleanor T. Beattie, who was arrested in London last June on a charge of grand larceny committed in New York and who has asked to be sent back for trial.

"King Lear" at Repertory.

LONDON—The new Repertory Theatre scheme had a most auspicious inaugural at the Haymarket with a performance of "King Lear," with Norman McKinnel in the title part. He gave a fine rendering of the character. There was a brilliant audience, who manifested much enthusiasm. The scenery and costumes were artistic and historically and theatrically interesting.

Tried to Kill Mistchenko.

ST. PETERSBURG—A private soldier named Kharkh has been sentenced to death for an attempt to kill Lieutenant-General Mistchenko during the manoeuvres of the Russian army in Turkestan in the Fall of 1908. According to the evidence Kharin, who was one of the best shots in the army, fired at General Mistchenko at a distance of 1,000 yards and wounded him.

Dutch Cheese, Not Cholera.

FALMOUTH, England—The British tank steamer Cheyenne, from Rotterdam, Sept. 2, for New York, has left here for her destination, after having been kept in quarantine at the request of the American authorities for four days, because she had two suspected cases of cholera on board. Investigation showed that the supposed victims were merely suffering from indigestion caused by eating Dutch cheese.

ALARM CLOCK 50c

TAUNTON MAN ARRESTED IN DEATH CASE

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Frank E. Webster, of Taunton, Mass., a pugilist, was arrested to-day at No. 148 Waverly place charged with the murder of Benjamin Rosenstock, a salesman, who was found stabbed to death in the furnished room house at No. 411 West Twenty-third street. Websters ring name is Frankie Ryan, according to the police. Inspector McCafferty put Webster through the third degree.

When arrested by Detectives Reich and VanWagner, Webster is said to have been found in the room of Rosenstock's clothing. It was also declared that a suit case belonging to Rosenstock was found in Webster's room as well as a quantity of clothing and other articles said to be the property of the dead man. The landlady of the West Twenty-third street house said her maid identified Webster.

Although Webster asserted that he was in Taunton Sunday afternoon, the maid declared that she saw Webster enter the house Saturday afternoon. She also asserted, the police say, that she saw Webster and Rosenstock leave the house and return together in the evening.

Webster did not deny acquaintance with Rosenstock. Inspector McCafferty said that the prisoner told conflicting stories and that no less than three different accounts of how he came into possession of Rosenstock's clothing.

THREE ACCUSED OF SELLING "DOPE"

Information received by the Watch and Ward Society and turned over to the police department resulted in the arrest of three men in the South End on the charge of selling drugs illegally. Two of them, Frank Jacobs of No. 1054 Washington street and Andrew Roble, alias Robert J. McCann of No. 148 Shawmut avenue, are charged with selling and peddling cocaine, the third arrest was that of Morris G. Perry, who says he owns the drug store at No. 101 Shawmut avenue, charged with selling morphine in a compound not marked "poison," as required by law. The sale alleged in this complaint is said to have been made to a Watch and Ward agent.

1,500 TO MARCH IN CHURCH PARADE

Commemorative of the fiftieth anniversary of St. Francis de Sales Catholic Church Bunker Hill street, Charlestown, of which the Rev. James N. Semple is pastor, a parade of the Knights of Columbus fourth degree members and the Holy Name Society will be held in that district Monday night. It is expected that 1,500 men will be in the line of march. The chief marshal of the parade will be Dr. John F. O'Brien. The procession will start from the front of the church and march to Sullivan square, to Main street, to Concord street, to Bunker Hill street, where it will disband.

SALEM FIGHTS 2-HOUR BOUT WITH FLAMES

SALEM, Sept. 9.—A fire which threatened to sweep the entire business section of the city and for which a general alarm was sounded broke out early to-day in the three-story wooden building in the rear of No. 227 Essex street, occupied by J. L. Longee and old $6,000 damage.

The building is situated in the heart of the business section and surrounded by blocks of wooden buildings and had there been any wind the entire district would have been wiped out, as the flames swept down on the adjoining buildings, starting small fires on the roofs and frames and sidewalls before they were kept extinguishing them.

The fire was discovered on the top floor of the building, which is used as the workroom by the Longee Company. It quickly ate its way through the roof and down into the second floor where much valuable machinery is stored.

Several policemen and citizens broke down the door of the cellar on the first floor and rescued four horses, several sets of harness and other property.

When the apparatus arrived the entire upper part of the building was a seething mass of flames and a shower of sparks and blazing brands fell upon the adjoining buildings starting small fires.

Chief William O. Arnold stationed several men on the roofs of the neighboring houses to extinguish the flames and keep the fire from spreading, and by that time the engines were made rapid headway and Chief Arnold ordered a general alarm.

The Trouble Wagon was also on the scene, was ordered by the flames but the fire was finally extinguished before it had completely gutted the building.

AWARDS CONTRACT FOR MARKET SEWER

Superintendent Emerson of the street department has awarded the contract for sewer construction in North Market street, to run from Commercial street and Faneuil Hall square, to the Coppinite & Sheehy Company for $13,782. The company was the second lowest bidder, being exceeded by that of J. H. Ferguson. Other bidders were P. W. Ellis, $17,917; Metropolitan Construction Co., $18,534.75; D. F. O'Connell Company, $23,530; J. J. Falvey $28,145.50.

RIGHT TO KILL DOG.

Associate Justice Walcott of the Cambridge District Court to-day told W. H. Dunning, treasurer of the Dover Stamping Company, that he had a perfect right to shoot any dog that attached him on the street. Mr. Dunning was in court in the case of John J. Corkery, who was fined $10 for not restraining his dog. The animal rushed out on the street and bit Dunning.

FORBIDS MRS. LONGWORTH A BALLOON TRIP

BEVERLY, Sept. 9.—Mrs. Nicholas Longworth is sorry that she ever said she would like to fly through the clouds. Ever since she laughingly made the remark to a party of friends, invitations have been showered upon her. Cranks, ambitious inventors and successful aviators, realizing the advertising that would follow a trip through the clouds with the daughter of ex-President Roosevelt, have besieged Mrs. Longworth with requests to accompany them. Mrs. Longworth never intended to go up in a balloon, according to a congressman Longworth, who said to-day:

"All this talk about Mrs. Longworth wanting to go up in a balloon is made out of whole cloth. She doesn't want to leave the earth. Even if she did I would not let her."

RECORDS A 'QUAKE 4,000 MILES AWAY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—The United States Weather Bureau issued the following bulletin to-day: "A well defined distant earthquake of moderate intensity was recorded here in the records of the Weather Bureau, beginning almost exactly at noon September 8. The first preliminary tremors began at 1.59.52 a. m. and the second at 12.00.00 m. The total duration of the earthquake was nearly two hours. The origin of the disturbance is placed at about 4,000 miles from Washington, and this bureau is inclined to believe it was located in the vicinity of the Aleutian Islands."

CORNERED TEA TO ANTICIPATE TARIFF

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—The fact has just become known through a report to the State Department that tea importers, nearly a year in advance of tariff legislation, prepared themselves for a tax on tea. They made a "corner" on tea so that the Congress placed a tax on that article they would obtain the benefit of the increase in price. Vice Consul Gassell, at Kobe, Japan, states that Japanese exporters shipped to the United States during the first six months of this year 19,068,231 pounds of tea, as against 5,581,115 pounds for the same period last year.

NEPONSET BRIDGE CLOSED TO TRAFFIC

Owing to the fact that engineers have condemned the draw of the bridge between Quincy and Neponset, except that part where the street railway tracks are, a section of the draw has been closed.

A stout plank fence has been built on the draw so that teams must use the section where the tracks are. The draw in part was strengthened some time ago.

It is thought that the present repairs will be temporary, as there is a prospect of a new bridge being built.

MAYOR STILL LOYAL TO HIS STRAW "LID"

Citizens of Boston, taxes paid or unpaid, are permitted by the executive example of Mayor Hibbard to wear their straw hats until October.

If harmony can be restored between City Hall and the Finance Commission, it is probable that many will be forced to stick to the comfortable Panama all Winter.

Mayor Hibbard will not go to the extent of issuing a formal proclamation authorizing a late season in Summer hats, as his colleagues in the post-office department. Mayor Fitz of the Congress, has just done, as a matter of such importance Boston's chief magistrate does not care to pin his name, but he might change his hat the next time he changes his mind, and have another hat on tap when the fresh idea comes.

But he is with the straw, but just the same Chairman Burr and Felts were pretty thick around the hall generally to-day, but the Staff of the mayor's office stood pat. The mayor had his straw on. Reggie Jimmie White was topped with the usual straw button and Collector Brown balanced his Panama.

Billy Rondout compromised between a straw and a derby, with a nobby felt hat. It is understood he got his signals mixed and will return to the official covering to-morrow.

Mayor Hibbard was shown Mayor Busse's proclamation which reads:

Office of the Mayor, City Hall, Chicago, Aug. 31, 1909.—In accordance with action by higher authorities and owing to the general hot weather, I, Fred A. Busse, Mayor of the city of Chicago, do hereby extend the time for wearing straw hats from September 1 to and including September 5.

He merely smiled and wig wagged the rim of his own hat with his eyes and let it go at that.

"MUTT" DIVES OFF BROOKLYN BRIDGE

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—A man who gave his name to the police as "A. Mutt" sprang from a trolley car and dived over the rail of the Brooklyn Bridge into the East River, 135 feet below. A tugboat captain, who saw the body come whirling down, fished the man from the water insensible, but still living. He recovered his senses at the Brooklyn Hospital and may live.

"SMELLERS" AND MAYOR REPLY AGAIN

City politicians tried to figure out today who was ahead in the controversy between the Finance Commission and Mayor Hibbard. The Finance Commission, "by John A. Sullivan, chairman," has charged its mind about not replying to replies to its own reports. In a brief but pointed communication to the Mayor, the commission acknowledges the receipt of his second reply to their attack on some of his acts and allows that this finance matter mixed up in his interpretation of the commission's report. The Mayor's first reply the commission declined to heed.

The commission still charged the Mayor with "padding pay rolls." The Mayor, in two replies, asserted that the city department accounts have been run during the first seven months of this year for $185,312.20 less than during the same period last year, when the commission admitted that he was practicing reform.

But, says the commission in reply, "seven months do not make a year, and a parson of parsons of years doesn't go at all."

The Mayor hasn't made up his mind yet whether or not to reply to the Finance Commission's latest shot. Friends of the Mayor say that he is satisfied with having made the commission break its anonymous shell and that it "would reply to no replies."

LEADING RUSSIAN MUSICIAN COMING

Appearing in his threefold capacity of pianist, composer and conductor, Sergei Rachmaninoff will make his debut in Boston with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday afternoon, October 29. He also will appear on Saturday evening, October 30, and these dates are already recorded on the local musical calendar. He will conduct his symphonic poem, "The Rocks," and play his second concerto for the piano.

Rachmaninoff ranks as the greatest living Russian composer, and as a pianist he has won large fame in Europe.

FLOWER PLOT ON DISPUTED STREET WALK

BROCKTON, Sept. 9.—Where once there was a macadamized sidewalk on the southeast corner of Pleasant street and Warren avenue, there is now a garden of lilies, for L. M. Reynolds decided to make it clear that he intends to keep the land around which he built a high board fence on Labor Day. "Revolution Park" is not been christened by the hundreds of shoe operatives who pass that way daily.

The "park" is about five feet at the longest point and is in the form of a triangle, jutting out from Mr. Reynolds's attractive grounds. He is an ex-shoe manufacturer and wealthy real estate owner, and when the corner was rounded off by the city two years ago no settlement was made with him.

After frequent attempts to obtain a price for the land this made a part of the public thoroughfare, all of which failed, he reclaimed it through the medium of a board fence. His men hacked up the sidewalk dressed the land with loam and set out plants in a variety of lilies.

Superintendent of Streets William H. Thorne, spurred by remonstrants who objected to walking around the flower bed, conferred with City Solicitor William G. Reed regarding the case.

The outcome of the conference, it is stated, will be a request at the next meeting of the Aldermen to seize the land according to law and then let the court fix the value of it, after it has once more become a sidewalk. Reynolds says he hopes to see the lilies in bloom before this happens.

STRAWBERRIES IN SEPTEMBER! TRUE!

BELVIDERE, N. J., Sept. 9.—The first September strawberries ever heard of in this part of the world are now on sale at the local market. They come from the farm of David Miller, just across the river in Pennsylvania. He brought in over twenty quarts today, and he says there are more coming.

IRISH GREET EXILE AFTER FORTY YEARS

WATERFORD, Ireland, Sept. 9.—Following their ovations of Queenstown and Dublin, Captain Edward O'Meagher Condon and Secretary John O'Callaghan of the United Irish League of America, received a tremendous welcome here; culminating in a great torchlight procession through the streets of the city, in which hundreds participated.

The visitors were accompanied by John E. Redmond, the leader of the Irish party in the House of Commons and other Irish M. P.'s. On their arrival they were received by Mayor White, High Sheriff Quinlan and a concourse of citizens. They were delighted to see Captain Condon, who was condemned to death in 1867 and for nearly half a century a stranger to Ireland.

A visit public meeting was held and speeches made by the Mayor, John E. Redmond, Captain Condon and Secretary O'Callaghan. Previously demonstrations were made while the party was visiting the historic battlefield of the rebellion of '98.

The municipal authorities in the towns of Arklow, Enniscorthy, Wexford, New Ross and elsewhere gave the distinguished visitors to the visitors, shared in by the clergy and representatives of various public bodies. Wexford, the city of Limerick was visited by Captain Condon and that of Sligo by both him and Secretary O'Callaghan.

Captain Condon's visit is evoking throughout the country demonstrations of interest and enthusiasm hitherto unequalled in a generation. His speeches supporting the Irish movement generally are creating a profound impression everywhere.

CITY REGISTRAR IS UNDER SIEGE

City Registrar McClennen's office in the Old Court House has taken on the appearance of a day nursery, and the office force has been obliged to work overtime as the result of the turning away of 500 small children from the schools in the North and West Ends.

All the little ones refused accommodations were, in the opinion of the teachers, not yet four years of age, and before they can be registered as pupils certificates of birth from the registrar's office must be shown. The influx of little ones, accompanied by their parents or clients, began yesterday afternoon and continued without abatement today.

The office force were all on the job at 8:30 a. m., one half hour earlier than usual in anticipation of the rush, and at one time it appeared as though some of the women clerks would have to be pressed into service as nurses. Up to noon 400 certificates had been furnished with the sign of an abatement in the applications.

MAN ON TRACK IS CRUSHED BY ENGINE

MERIDITH, N. H., Sept. 9.—An unknown man, well dressed and with a large sum of money in his pockets, was struck early today by the forty morning Boston-bound train and is dying at the Elm Hotel. Papers in the pocket of the unknown are inscribed to J. J. Paquette, Barton, Vt. The accident happened at the John Carder crossing at the outlet of Lake Waukewan, a mile north of Meredith station. The engineer of the train states that as he rounded the curve by the lakeside, he saw the figure of a man stretched across the track, but was able to only partially check the speed of the train. The man was buried from the track and his skull was crushed in.

MYSTERY OF ROTHSCHILD'S DEATH ENDS

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—The details of the tragic love story of the late Baron Oskar Rothschild and beautiful Olga Menn—the old story of the struggle of the scion of a noble family to overcome the barriers of caste to marry an American girl—were revealed to-day.

A few hours after the arrival of the prostrated young woman in Chicago to-day, Mrs. Rudolph Menn, mother of Miss Olga, told the entire story. She cleared up all the mystery that surrounded the case from the time the Baron first saw her daughter, last May, until he ended his life in despair at the Rothschild palace in Vienna. Incidentally, the real cause of the Baron's suicide became known. It was not secrecy because he was not permitted to marry the young woman he loved, but to his father that his affection was pure. Letter because he could not marry her first if after the insight that had been heaped upon his finance by his son.

That such was the case was proved in a long letter sent by the Baron to his father before he took his life. That such a letter was written has been denied by the Rothschilds.

Gets Share of His Estate.

Mrs. Menn today confirmed the story that her daughter is the chief beneficiary under the will of her late wife and provision for her was made after he had been refused parental permission to marry the girl.

"Although we do not know just what amount is left to my daughter," said Mrs. Menn, "we were notified by an agent of the Austrian government that she is given a large part of the estate the Baron inherited from his mother. The young Baron was immensely rich, notwithstanding his father had cut him off from inheritance.

The parting farewell to Miss Menn was of such a pathetic nature that Mrs. Menn would not discuss it, except in a general way. Part of the letter, dated 8 p. m., July 12th follows:

His Last Letter.

"My own darling Olga: It is now too late for us to hope. I cannot make you my wife, and but one thing remains for me—death. I shall never see you again. Remember our happy hours together. Our unhappy dreams never are to come true in this world.

"Another development was the discovery that the father of Baron Oskar indicated by his cables to his son that he would consent to a marriage to Miss Menn. These cables were of almost daily occurrence and all of favorable tone until the young man was again under the paternal roof.

The first misleading cable from Baron Rothschild that carried such joy to the young couple read as follows:

"Baron Oskar Rothschild will receive ladies at palace. Stated age of daughter and other details."

It was the assurance, and this satisfies Mrs. Menn, that caused her daughter to consent to become the wife of Baron Rothschild.

BLIND CHAPLAIN'S DAUGHTER IS DEAD

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—Miss Lizzie Gemler, adopted daughter of the late Wilbur Emery Milburn, for many years chaplain of the United States Senate, is dead at the residence of Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst near Pleasanton. Death came suddenly after an illness of only a few hours. Miss Gemler was stricken Tuesday as she was about to retire. An automobile rushed to Pleasanton for a physician, but he arrived afterward. He could do nothing to save the young woman. Miss Gemler had been spending several months with Mrs. Hearst, and during her stay on the ranch had made many friends in this city.

DRAPER GUEST AT OLD HOME WEEK TO-DAY

PITTSFIELD, Sept. 9.—Governor Draper is to-day the guest of the Merchants' Association of Pittsfield, the Old Home Week Committee of North Adams, and the Hoosac Valley Agricultural Society, which is holding its annual fair at North Adams.

With the Governor are Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, Adjutant-General Brigham, Major Soucy, Captain Nicholson and Lieutenant Hinkley.

After a luncheon provided by the Merchants' Association, the Governor and his party are to motor to North Adams, where the Old Home Week Committee and the fair will be the attractions.

The Governor came here from Stockbridge, where he attended a meeting of the Laurel Hill Association, the oldest village improvement society in the country, which was followed by a dinner at the Stockbridge Inn.

At Stockbridge also, the members of the party were guests of State Auditor A. T. Treadway. Other guests were Joseph H. Choate, Ambassador to Great Britain; Daniel Chester French, Richard Watson Gilder, and Henry A. Garfield, president of Williams College.

LYNN GIRL TO WED INDIAN

Miss Ethel S. Colcord of No. 5 Seaside terrace, Lynn, has announced that on October 1 she will leave Lynn to go to London to meet and marry Birendra Chandra Bose, a native of India and a member of a wealthy family of royal lineage.

Miss Colcord met Birendra while he was a student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. They loved mutually at first sight, but when Birendra asked Miss Colcord to marry him her parents refused their consent. But Birendra persisted, and after a time Miss Colcord was convinced that her future should be of her own devising, and disregarded the wishes of her parents.

Miss Colcord is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Colcord, both of whom are advanced in years. Her father is a retired druggist.

VETERAN'S LUCK STANDS BY HIM

GREENWICH, Ct., Sept. 9.—Sergeant Andrew Driscoll of the Fighting Seventh Regiment of the Civil War went through many a battle without receiving a scratch, and his good luck continues with him. He is an inmate of the Soldiers' Home at Norton Heights, and saved up his money, which he invested in an automobile in Brooklyn.

Frank A. Benton of Stamford and the old man went to Brooklyn and Benton bought the automobile. They started for three miles of Stamford the car took a sharp turn and refused to head up straight and narrow way on the Post road. The machine was overturned and into a railing obstacle an embankment.

Benton was cut and bruised, but the old man landed on foot below in the ditch. He wasn't even scratched.

WOMAN LABOR ORATOR.

Miss Kate Barnard, commissioner of charities for Oklahoma, will speak in Faneuil Hall this evening at 8 o'clock, on "The Fight for Human Liberty—the Fight for Child Life." Miss Barnard is the author of "Eight Laws" of the newly organized Legislature of Oklahoma, and director of one of the State's departments of charities and corrections, and she will speed to organized labor to be in Faneuil Hall this evening.

Japanese Prince and Princess, Nation's Guests, Here Today

Prince and Princess Kuni.

Prince and Princess Kuni of Japan, accompanied by an entourage of five, besides representatives of the United States army and the Department of State, are on their way to Boston.

The distinguished party will be met upon arriving here by Mr. F. H. Wadsuff, honorary consul for Japan, who will escort them to the Touraine, where quarters have been reserved for them.

To-morrow the Prince and Princess, who are the guests of the United States Government while in the country, will go to Beverly, where they will be received by President Taft. They will return to Boston to-morrow evening.

It is the intention of the imperial party to spend the time quietly while here. Harvard University, the Art Museum, the Navy Yard and other points of interest will be visited during the five days that the party will remain.

Besides the distinguished visitors will go to Newport, where they will have a week of social activity. They will then go to New York to witness the Hudson-Fulton celebration.

The Prince, who is a cousin of the Mikado of Japan, is accompanied by a major in the Japanese army, and served through the war with Russia. He is accompanied by Colonel Kurita, as military aide, his valet and a secretary. The Princess is attended by Mrs. Hagasaki, a lady in waiting to the Empress, and a maid.

Prince Kuni stands only a trifle over four feet high, and does not look like the warrior that his history tells that he is. His head just reaches the shoulders of the Princess. While in America they wear ordinary clothing and the Prince does not wear a shade of decoration, nor even the medal indicative of his war service.

13-YEAR-OLD GIRL VANISHES

Marietta d'Orazio, a pretty Italian girl, thirteen years old, is missing from her home at No. 118 Commercial street, and the police of several cities are searching for her. They think there is a heart interest involved in her disappearance. The Hanover street police, after hearing the story of Antonio d'Orazio, her father, took Mrs. Egidia de Vito of No. 338 Commercial street into custody on the charge of abduction. She is the mother of Francesco de Vito, who is nine years the girl's senior, and the police say he is her sweetheart.

According to the police, Mrs. de Vito asked the girl's mother to let Marietta go with her as interpreter on a shopping tour when the girl did not come home. Mrs. D'Orazio went to the De Vito home to find her and she found a note purporting to have been written by the girl. It reads: "Dear Parents—Don't question my sweetheart's parents about my absence. If you say you will that I have gone. Marietta."

SAVED MAN'S LIFE, IS WILLED $100,000

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 9.—After a year's search, agents of the estate of Wilbur Anderson, in England, have found Mrs. Hattie Cuthert Winders, a young widow, to tell her she has a bequest of $100,000 as a reward for saving Mr. H. Anderson, Jr., in a railway accident years ago. She lives at Edington, near here, and the difficulty in finding her was due to the fact that the Andersons knew her only as Miss Cathart. Her maiden name.

WHIST FOR CHARITY.

The regular Thursday whist party to aid in raising a fund for the Free Home for Consumptives will be held this evening by the Young Ladies' Charitable Association at the grounds at No. 428 Quincy street. After the game there will be dancing.

BOSTON BEST LIGHTED CITY

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 9.—Boston is the best lighted city in the country, according to the report made to the city council by a committee that visited the hub to make an investigation of the matter. Chairman Easterbrooks of the committee had this to say:

"Boston has at present the distinction of being the best lighted city in the country, especially in its parks and squares. As the result of our investigation this evening, the members of the committee believe that there are possibilities in this city of going Boston one better.

"There 6 and 8-10 amperes are used, while here the local lighting company is supplying for 10 amperes. This large amperage naturally allows a great and illuminating power. In fact, the Boston lighting people believe the advantages here are most excellent."

VETERAN SEEKS HIS LOST MEDAL

Captain James Russell, a white-haired veteran of three wars, who has but one leg, to-day appealed to the readers of the AMERICAN to aid him in his search for the silver medal awarded to him thirty-one years ago for saving a man from drowning, which he lost in Charlestown last week.

One afternoon last week while Captain Russell was walking to his home at No. 11 Pike street, Charlestown, he fell drowsy and rested himself on a bench in City Square. When he awoke he found that the medal, which he wore pinned on his vest, had disappeared.

ROXBURY MAN SUICIDE.

Hanging from a beam in the cellar of his home, No. 16 Franklin street, Roxbury, the dead body of Louis Maudine, forty years of age, was discovered by his wife.

A CONSUMPTIVE'S BATTLE FOR LIFE

When Despair Seemed All That Was Left for Him He Strives, Even When the Doctors Give Him up, and Recovers Through Faithful Use of Father John's Medicine.

This experience of a man who was given up by the doctors as a victim of consumption, of his struggle for health and of his complete restoration to vigorous manhood is told by Roswell H. Lewis, of 61 Second street, Gloversville, N. Y., in order that all who are suffering toward consumption may have the advantage of the means he took to fight the disease.

Mr. Lewis in January began to lose flesh, perhaps, lost 21 pounds, and in April was so weak he could hardly stand. A examination of his chest was held and the verdict was that it was consumption, that one lung was nearly gone.

Then followed trips to the Adirondacks and Adirondack, but after his return home his case was so bad that his pastor and other friends in his church called to see him for the last time, they supposed.

It was at this stage that he began to take Father John's Medicine. Three bottles of the medicine increased his weight 15 pounds, and by continuing faithfully with the medicine he soon was restored to perfect health.

"If I were able I would give every consumptive Father John's Medicine," says Mr. Lewis. "For I know what it can do when given a fair trial."

Mr. Lewis says his recovery was such a surprise to his friends that it was made the subject for a sermon by the pastor, a prayer meeting in the Methodist Church, which is attending to assemble. "I want the public to know what Father John's Medicine has done for me," adds Mr. Lewis, at the close of his review of his remarkable case.

YOUTH ROBBED, LEFT DYING IN LONELY ROAD

MANCHESTER, Sept. 9.—Mystery surrounds the case of Edgar W. Story, who is dying to-day at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar B. Story at Magnolia and Western avenues. Story was found lying unconscious in the middle of Raymond street near the Hotel Blynman late at night.

The first that the police knew of the case was when they received word that a man had been sandbagged and robbed and left to die in the middle of the roadway near the hotel.

Shortly after the police received this word a stranger in an automobile brought the unconscious man to police headquarters. He said he had found him in the roadway. The man was without shoes, money or watch.

Although a local physician said there was no evidence of foul play, and that the case was simply one of epilepsy, Story's friends adhere to the belief that he was sandbagged and robbed.

Story went to Boston early in the day and cashed a draft for $300, in order to reach his home from the Magnolia station he was obliged to travel along a lonely road, very poorly lighted. The fact that no money was found in his clothes many think is a fair supposition that he was the victim of footpads.

The police are utterly at a loss to account for the loss of Story's shoes. That fact only deepens the mystery.

WED AT WISH OF HARRIMAN

ARDEN, N. Y., Sept. 9.—In accordance with a peremptory order issued by E. H. Harriman, Miss Florence McMillan, formerly the personal attendant of Mrs. Harriman, and George Murphy, assistant superintendent of the Harriman estate here, were married to-day.

The pair have been engaged for many months and have postponed their wedding at the request of Mrs. Harriman, who wanted them to wait until her husband recovers.

It is said suggested that the ceremony be postponed again, when Mr. Harriman hearing of it, issued this order from his sick room:

"Get the wedding arrangements proved. Don't let an old man like me interfere with the young people's happiness."

He gave them $500 as a present. The ceremony took place in St. Anastasia's Catholic Church here.

SCIENTIST DROPS DEAD.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—A. M. Pitts, city agent for the New York Central lines, dropped dead while attending a meeting in the Fourth Church of Christ, Scientist, to-day. Pitts had been suffering from heart disease for the past year and it is this that caused his sudden death.

CONVICT BEGAN REAL REFORM IN JAIL CELL

CALDWELL, N. J., Sept. 9.—John Luddy was convicted on December 14, 1908, at Newark for breaking into a house and stealing and was sentenced to one year's imprisonment in the Essex County Penitentiary.

Shortly after he was locked up he told the warden, Daniel R. Martin, that he was tired of leading a rogue's life and would reform; that when he served his term he would lead an honest life. Luddy has been a model prisoner and Warden Martin took a great deal of interest in him.

The convicts in the Essex County Penitentiary are leased to a contractor and work in a handkerchief factory. Luddy was working there when William Neary, one of the instructors, went to him and showed him how to make a new and difficult stitch. After Neary left Luddy saw a wallet lying on the floor. He picked it up and hid it in his sleeve. When he got an opportunity to examine it he found that it contained $15.

At the first opportunity Luddy told Keeper Matthew Carroll of his find and gave him the pocketbook to give to the owner. Then he went on making handkerchiefs.

"Luddy could have hidden the money easily and would not have been suspected of taking it," said the warden. "Neary did not know where he had lost it. But Luddy wouldn't keep it. He told me that he intended to live an honest life and thought he might as well begin right here and now instead of waiting until he got out."

HOTEL MURDER CASE IS BEGUN

Mrs. Elizabeth G. Richmond was accused to-day by District Attorney Hoagins, when he appeared before the Middlesex County grand jury at the session of Superior Court Tavish in her house, the Hotel Florence, on July 23.

The woman is proprietor of the hotel at No. 135 Cambridge street, East Cambridge, where McTavish, a hospital attendant in East Gardner, was found dead. He had been a guest there for two days. There was a bullet hole in his head, which had been terribly battered.

When Mrs. Richmond was locked in a cell in the East Cambridge jail, Duke Richmond, her husband, serving a sentence for drunkenness, was set free to care for his two young daughters. He is widely known for his skill as a marble carver.

Several witnesses for the government appeared before the grand jury in this case. Among them was Chief Inspector Hurley of the Cambridge Police Department. It is expected that the jury will report to-morrow afternoon.

DYING WOMAN FIGHTS POLICE HOSPITAL TRIP

Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor, thirty-five years old, of No. 810 Mt. Auburn street, Watertown, is in the Cambridge Hospital as a result of an alleged attempt to kill herself at her home. A bullet from a revolver entered her left breast and came out at the back of her neck.

The doctor advised the immediate removal of Mrs. Taylor to the hospital, but she protested in the most emphatic manner. Thereupon, the police were notified and Patrolmen McNamara and Burke were obliged to use force to get the injured woman into the ambulance. She contended that she wanted to die in the historical manner in the most determined manner.

NAME MEN TO HEAR CHARGES

Chairman Brand of the Board of Aldermen has announced the appointment of a special committee to investigate the charges made by Alderman Curley that the New England Sanitary Product Company is engaging in carrying the names of politicians on its pay rolls.

The committee consists of Aldermen Colton, O'Hare and Hale. It is expected to begin work promptly. It is appointed under an order offered by Alderman Attridge of Ward 9, following the charge of Alderman Curley that the New England Sanitary Product Company was carrying the name of James Donovan and other prominent politicians on both parties on its pay rolls. Mr. Donovan, who is president of the Democratic City Committee, appeared in the Finance Commission and the District Attorney for an investigation, but thus far neither has taken action.

CANADA'S HIGHEST PEAK IS SCALED

WINNIPEG, Sept. 9.—Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies, was successfully climbed on August 13 by Prof. Henry George Kenny of Victoria, B. C. Mount Robson has an altitude of 14,000 feet, and hundreds of unsuccessful attempts have been made to scale it.

IS WEDDED BEFORE 12,000 CAMPMEETERS

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 9.—Before a crowd of nearly 12,000 persons, taxing the capacity of the great Ocean Grove auditorium, Miss Anna Stokes Ballard, daughter of Bishop and Mrs. Ballard of the Campmeeting Association, became the wife of Lloyd Lewis of New York and Nutley, N. J.

FRIDAY ARROW SALE

Every Friday we hold an Arrow Sale, when we mark down for quick selling all odd lots, broken sizes, single pieces, samples, goods soiled or crushed in handling or used in window displays, and goods that for any reason have been slow in selling.

By this method we are able to keep our stocks fresh, clean and correct in every way.

—Owing to the prevalence of exaggerated comparisons in Boston, comparative values in this store's advertising are entirely omitted—even in describing bargains. Hence the name —Non-Comparative Price store.

ARMOUR & CO. SUPPLIED BOTH POLE HUNTERS

Both Dr. Cook and Commander Peary got their food supplies for their dashes to the Pole from Armour & Co., and both used pemmican as a mainstay. Peary, who had a bigger party, took about three times as much in the way of canned meats and pemmican as Cook. Peary outfitted in New York through the late Morris K. Jesup, and Cook obtained his supplies here of Joseph E. Twombly, the Armour representative. Cook took about a ton, or 2,000 pounds, of pemmican alone. Regarding the part Armour & Co. took in outfitting the polar discoverers, Mr. Twombly said to-day:

"The food supply is the main thing in an attempt to reach the North Pole. Transportation up there is so difficult that bulk has to be considered. It is necessary, in order to be able to carry food enough, to have only the most nutritious food and to have it in highly concentrated form. Pemmican has been found an answer requirements better than anything else. But it will never be a popular diet. It satisfies and heats the body, but it hasn't the bulk to satisfy the appetite. It is a starvation food.

"Pemmican is made of lean beef minus all sinew and fat. It is dried and powdered and mixed with tallow, suet, ground raisins and currants, salt, pepper and sugar. It is compressed into bricks about the size of those used in building. It is wrapped in parafine paper and isn't canned. It is brown in color and one pound contains as much nutritious value as ten pounds of fresh beef. It will keep indefinitely and even in the tropics. But it wouldn't be of value there. It would be too much blood and is too heating. It is sold at an average price of about $1 a pound.

"Aborigines in the Far North originally made pemmican, using reindeer meat as the basis. For twenty-five years Armour & Company have made pemmican for every expedition for the North Pole. In fact it has been pemmican for polar explorers only. There is no other demand for it. Commander Peary says he has not found anything to equal pemmican as a food in the polar region.

NEW JERSEY'S BAN ON THE FRYING PAN

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Sept. 9.—The Montclair Board of Education has dealt a solar plexus blow to the great American frying pan. When the list of utensils to be bought for the High School kitchen was presented Benjamin V. Harrison protested against the inclusion of frying pans. Harrison said: Frying pans mean fat. Fat requires hams, croquettes and beef croquettes, and these mean digestion. The members of the board agreed with Harrison. It was decided to appropriate $200 for utensils for the kitchen and to bar frying pans.

SAYS POND IS FULL OF TYPHOID GERMS

At a meeting of the Melrose Board of Trade, Dr. J. S. Clark startled the members by announcing that the ice that has been cut from Ell pond in that city for the past several years is not fit to use, and in his opinion that is a certain cause that the ice has bred typhoid fever. He said steps should be taken to disinfect the ice houses on the shores of the pond. Colonel F. S. Hopkins corroborated the statements of Dr. Clark, and wanted to have the matter laid before the Legislature for further action.

GENERAL ARMSTRONG DEAD

BAR HARBOR, Me., Sept. 9.—General Frank C. Armstrong, famous as an Indian fighter and for his services in the Confederate army, is dead here. He was born on the Choctaw agency, Indian Territory, and was educated at Holy Cross College.

RENA DWYER, WHO WILL APPEAR IN FLORIDA FETES

Sixteen-year-old Rena Dwyer, the pretty golden haired Charlestown schoolgirl, who has won laurels by her clever portrayal of "Cinderella" in the outdoor pageant of "Wonderland this season, has been engaged to appear at the fetes of the society people in the large hotels at Palm Beach, Fla., next Winter.

The talented young girl, who has appeared on the stage with many of the leading stars of the country since she was twelve years old, is looking forward with expectancy to her trip to the Southland. Miss Dwyer was educated for the stage at the Dorothea Dix House, where so many clever juvenile entertainers have been trained. She is regarded in her friends as one of the cleverest juvenile actresses in New England. She has appeared in stock parts with Laurence Irving, Julia Marlowe, Ben Greet, George Mackey, and Lindsay Morrison.

Often Miss Dwyer has essayed the part of a boy, and it was with George Mackey in "Little Lord Fauntleroy" that Miss Dwyer made her debut six years ago. At that time her acting was so clever that many managers sought to engage her talent for their productions.

Miss Dwyer's whirlwind jump-rope and sand dance at the finale of "Cinderella" at Wonderland this year has won for her the hits of the outdoor performance.

"I just can't wait to get down to Florida," said Miss Dwyer to-day. "It will be a novel experience and I am sure I will grand that I shall appreciate it. I aspire to be one of the greatest actresses in the country. I think that there is a great opportunity to be taken up late work in the higher court. The first the district attorney knew of the disappearance of the reports was when the book containing a list of reports was received from Boston with the twelve most important missing. Mrs. Helen G. McDermott has been put to work on the books to verify the list and will report again. It is surmised in some quarters that an agent of the federal government from Boston may have taken the cases.

BROKER, BLIND THREE YEARS, SEES AGAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—E. H. Thorburn, formerly a well known of the Board of Trade, who three years ago left Chicago totally blind after eminent specialists had despaired of his case, walked into the offices of his former friends a well man with perfect vision.

Mr. Thorburn lost the sight of one of his eyes in boyhood, and about three years ago a cataract began to dim the vision of the other. He finally became so blind that he could not distinguish night from day. When specialists here ceased to hold out hope of his recovery those of New York and Boston were visited, but with the same result.

Mr. Thorburn then went to Europe, and while in London arranging to open a real estate business he met Dr. Charles Collins, an eye specialist. The doctor became interested in Thorburn and asked him to accompany him to his office and submit to an examination. Protesting that the visit was useless, Thorburn went, and spent the day with Dr. Collins.

"I will make no promises, but I have an honest belief that I can restore the partial use of the eyes," said the surgeon.

An operation was performed that afternoon, and the doctor was right in his prediction. Blinding himself while suffering intense pain, Thorburn, before having submitted to the operation, he fell asleep in the early hours of the morning.

Passing traffic aroused him about noon, and for the first time in more than two years he perceived a ray of light. He feared at first it was a dream, but a servant coming into the room a few minutes later brought him face to face with the happy truth.

DISMISS CHARGES AGAINST OFFICER

WAKEFIELD, Sept. 9.—After a three hour session for selectmen practically exonerated Patrolman James C. Preston, against whom charges were brought by George R. Singer some time since. The charges had to do with the arrest of Singer's son, Irving Singer. There were two distinct charges, the first that the arrest was needless and the second that Preston was rude to Mr. Singer, a police officer and had used language unbecoming an officer.

WALPOLE IN NEED OF SCHOOL ROOMS

WALPOLE, Sept. 9.—Many of the children here are going to school for half a day only, and others can find no accommodations at all. Citizens are planning to hold an indignation meeting and to compel the special committee to open the old high school building.

WILL DIE TO TEST LIFE ELIXIR

SOUTH NORWALK, Ct., Sept. 9.—To test an elixir he says will restore life after a several hours of an unnatural death, Thaddeus Thiele, a scientist, announced he is ready to submit himself for a test. He says he is willing to die any kind of a death except one that injures a vital organ from suicide.

OLD SOLDIER BURIED.

The funeral of Michael Kearns, one of the oldest Grand Army men in Dorchester, was held to-day from his home, No. 18 Hancock street. A solemn high mass of requiem was said in St. Matthew's Church by the Rev. W. J. Connolly, S. J., being celebrated by the Rev. John Y. Crosbie, S. J., and the Rev. Walter Sweeney, sub-deacon. A delegation from John A. Andrew Post No. 15, G. A. R., attended.

LIQUOR EVIDENCE STRANGELY GONE

WORCESTER, Sept. 9.—District Attorney George S. Taft is investigating the strange disappearance of the stenographic reports of twelve liquor cases that were tried in the lower court and are due to be taken up late next in the higher court. The first the district attorney knew of the disappearance of the reports was when the book containing a list of reports was received from Boston with the twelve most important missing. Mrs. Helen G. McDermott has been put to work on the books to verify the list and will report again. It is surmised in some quarters that an agent of the federal government from Boston may have taken the cases.

PEARY'S STORY HELPS TO SUPPORT COOK'S CLAIM

Commander Made Greater Speed on Trip Than Cook, Yet Latter's Critics Said Fifteen Miles a Day Was Impossible.

Dispatches received from Commander Robert E. Peary, U. S. N., today curiously enough tend to add strength to the claim of Dr. Frederick A. Cook that he was the first explorer to reach the North Pole.

One reason cited by the skeptics for doubting Cook's story of his discovery was that he claimed to have averaged fifteen miles a day on the perilous journey into the northern unknown. Those who disbelieved him made a strong point of this before Peary was heard from.

Now comes Commander Peary's story that he crossed the ice a year later, meeting numerous stretches of open water, yet making greater speed than did Dr. Cook. He says that the return journey to the ship was made in twenty days.

The Boston Post to-day prints a dispatch sent by Commander Peary from the Labrador coast, giving a number of facts concerning his journey to the Pole of interest to geographers, but which does not contain details of the trip there and back to Greenland.

These are some of the points which tend either to confirm or disprove Dr. Cook's contention that he was first at the Pole:

Some scientists claimed Cook's speed of fifteen miles a day near the Pole was absurd.

Peary surpassed Cook in speed and actually made the journey, as compared with Cook, fourteen days quicker.

Cook says he stayed at the Pole only two days and then turned back. Some comment was caused by his short stay, inferring that he took insufficient time for observations.

Peary remained at the Pole only one day.

Cook found no records left by other explorers.

Peary found four records.

Cook's claim is made plausible by the fact that he encountered no

...ently delayed by open water.

It took Cook nearly a year to make the return journey.

Peary made the trip back to his ship in twenty days.

Cook had no witnesses save two Eskimos.

Peary evidently had quite a party with him, according to his dispatch.

Here are the deductions made by the Post from the news contained in the Peary dispatches:

Peary's dash to the Pole is shown by his dates to have been fourteen days quicker than Cook's, between the same degrees of latitude. Cook started from the shore of Greenland at Etah at 78 deg. 20 min., while Peary's dash began at Cape Sheridan, about 82 deg. 30 min. Beginning at 84 deg., however, there is opportunity to compare their speeds.

Cook crossed 84 deg. on March 30, 1908, while Peary crossed 84 deg. on March 11 the next year. Cook got to 86 deg. 30 min. on April 14, and Peary got there on April 2.

Cook has made no mention of a single record reached the Pole, and record picked up. It is the established Peary on April 6. For the stages where custom for Arctic explorers to cons such their course is comparable, therefore, record. Peary picked up four such records Peary outran Cook by about two weeks. Peary evidently had a large party of This will be a factor in Cook's favor witnesses at the Pole, because he says,

"All returning left North Pole, April 7. These witnesses will be arrayed against the two Eskimos that danced at Cook's triumph.

In making the dash Peary had the advantage of beginning the sledge journey by full 280 miles north of Cook's starting out.

How Winters Differ.

This would indicate that the two Winters between these degrees of latitude were very different, Peary finding too much water and Cook finding too much ice.

Cook makes no mention of big open leads, saying: "Young ice spread on the narrow spaces of open water so rapidly that little delay was caused in crossing from one field to another."

Peary tells of a very different Polar region, as his summary is a constant succession of delays caused by open stretches of water. He mentions seven different places where there were delays of at least one day, with two days on March 2 and 3, and a whole week of March 4 to 11.

Cook left on February 19 for his trip over the ice, which was the dawn of the Polar day; this was likewise Peary's plan, as he started February 15.

Cook insists that he was able to cover only about 100 miles in nine days from 84 deg. 47 min. to the Pole, but this year of the journey took Peary 19 days, from March 11 to March 27.

SYDNEY, EN FETE, AWAITS EXPLORER

SYDNEY, Cape Breton, Sept. 9.—The first Americans to greet Commander Peary and extend personal congratulations on his own country are arriving here to-day. They and Sydney excited with keen anticipation, though it is not yet known when the Roosevelt can be expected. Peary will find a large number of Americans to welcome him, among them his wife and family; Herbert L. Bridgman, secretary of the Peary Arctic Club; Henry F. Rowe, personal friend and representative of a New York publishing house; a number of Americans tourists and an army of newspaper correspondents, who began arriving this morning.

Sydney holds a warm spot in the explorer's heart. He has made it a stopping place on unsuccessful voyages, and the people feel sure that he will remember them in the flush of his victory. The preparations for a great demonstration were continued with renewed vigor to-day. All the available tugs, motor boats and sailing vessels are being chartered and decorated. Many private launches and schooner yachts are being prepared to meet and escort the Roosevelt up the harbor. The city will tender an official reception to the commander, with a Dominion government representative present, and a general holiday will be proclaimed.

Excursions will be run over the railroads, and preparations are being made to handle great crowds. The demonstration will include a banquet, a parade and private functions. Bunting and flags will decorate the houses. The police are preparing to handle unprecedented crowds on the harbor front.

United States Consul John E. Rehl and the civic authorities are in charge of the preliminaries. Mr. Rehl has arranged with the Cape Breton Electric Company, an American corporation, to send out its ferry boat to welcome the Roosevelt. The Royal Cape Breton Yacht Club will send out four of their biggest and swiftest motor boats and above North Sydney if the water be placid. The launches will likely be filled with children carrying American and Canadian flags.

PEARY CALLS COOK STORY 'LAUGHABLE'

The New York Press to-day prints the following special story of Peary's arrival at Battle Harbor, Labrador, and an interview with him:

BATTLE HARBOR, Labrador, Sept. 8.—Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, arrived here to-day on the steamship Roosevelt at 10 a. m. today. He and the members of his expedition were bolling with enthusiasm. Peary's first act after a tumultuous reception was to take hold of the wireless station here and send a story of his Pole discovery. He candidly said that he was getting paid for an exclusive account of his finds in the Arctic and that, national figures as he is, the money obligations must count first with him. He declined to talk, nor would he let his lieutenants discuss the story of his famous trip until he had put his narrative on the wire. Even then at the end all he would say was this:

"We discovered the Pole, and no other men preceded us. We mapped new lands, located new Arctic currents, settled for all time the ocean drift, remained at the Pole for full and accurate observations, and put the American flag on the apex of the earth.

"The story of Cook's exploit is laughable. We know how far he went, where he remained and what he did. Before I left the United States I signed a contract to send the first news in narrative to a newspaper syndicate, and hence cannot until to-morrow say generally what we found on top of the earth. You can say we occupied the Pole, that the land and water there are no longer a mystery, and that our proofs, first taken on April 6, are complete in every detail."

"FEDERAL OFFICERS COULD SETTLE ROW BY SEEING DATA"

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—If Dr. Frederick A. Cook and Commander R. E. Peary will give their joint consent, the dispute as to whether either or both of them actually reached the North Pole can be officially and definitely settled within thirty days by referring the question to officials of the United States government, whose decision will not only be absolutely free of personal bias but so authoritative and competent that no reasonable doubt can be raised as to its correctness and general finality.

Assistant Superintendent Frank Perkins of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey said to-day in answer to an inquiry on the part of the American News Service:

"If applications were made by Commander Peary or Dr. Cook or both of them to Secretary Nagel of the Department of Commerce and Labor, or to Superintendent Otto H. Tittman of the Survey, that their data showing the observations taken on the way to the North Pole be examined for the purpose of passing upon their genuineness and correctness, thus directly joining beyond question if they reached the Pole, such examination would be undertaken and would probably be completed within thirty days.

"If application were made to the secretary he would probably refer the subject to Superintendent Tittman, asking him if his office was prepared to undertake it. Such application would mean an affirmative reply would quite likely direct that it be made."

PEARY WENT TO THE NORTH POLE 'TO FIND A COOK!'

The latest contribution to the Peary-Cook controversy developed at the Navy Yard when a group of men were engaged in an animated discussion of the matter.

"Have you heard about the shortage of servants in this country?" suddenly interjected a man who had been taking little part in the arguments.

"No; what about it?"

"Why, Peary went to the North Pole to find a Cook."

MRS. COOK SILENT AFTER LEARNING OF PEARY'S CHARGES

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—If, as has been said with some positiveness, Mrs. Frederick A. Cook has passed the point that her husband was the first to reach the North Pole, no representations made to her that she owes it to her husband to correct any of the doubts surrounding his reports could induce her to break her silence.

Peary's message saying: "Do not credit Cook's story seriously," and his later message saying: "I have him (Cook) nailed," were communicated to Mrs. Cook through her friend, Mrs. Davison, and also by Dr. Cook's brother, William L. Cook, but to only reply Mrs. Cook would make was given out through Mrs. Davison and merely recited once more her confidence in her husband and her belief that he had facts that will prove his claim.

"SOUTH POLE NEXT FOR PEARY'S SHIP," SAYS BRIDGMAN

ST. JOHN, N. B., Sept. 9.—As soon as the Roosevelt arrives at Sydney, H. L. Bridgman will apply by telegraph to the Hudson-Fulton celebration commission in New York city to allow the boat a place in the naval parade.

Mr. Bridgman speaks confidently of the possibility of an American Antarctic exploration which, he said, Commander Peary had more or less definitely planned before his last start northward.

"The good ship Roosevelt," said Mr. Bridgman, "is likely to play a prominent part in such an expedition. She is especially now and is not fitted up for commercial purposes. It is her manifest destiny to continue in the work of exploration."

NOW IT'S CLEAR; COOK HAD UNION MADE CLOTHING

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The labor unions in this city also made a discovery to-day. It is that the first union suit to reach the North Pole bore the stamp of the Garment Workers' Union of America.

"Yes, sir, exultantly exclaimed former President Charles E. Roberts of the union. "Dr. Cook before starting out to find the North Pole ordered fur coats and blankets bearing the union label. But for that fact he would not have reached the Pole. Non-union clothes would not have stood the test."

The union tailors celebrated all over the East Side last night and when Dr. Cook reaches they will parade in his honor.

NAUGHTY POLE.

By Morton Birge.

Oh, the old North Pole was a wicked old soul,
And a wicked old soul was he;
But his shady past is revealed at last
As plain as plain can be.

He was seen by Cook, but in Peary's book
No record of Cook is writ.
The Pole's found out; he had moved about
And never stayed home a bit.

Let this hard, cold fact of the Arctic tract
Put an end to the polar strife.
The old North Pole, the explorers' goal,
Was leading a double life.

COOK-PEARY ROW IS TO BE TAKEN BEFORE CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Congress will be the scene of a Cook-Peary wrangle when the Senate and House convene in December. Several members will seek to be the first to introduce resolutions giving the thanks of Congress to Dr. Cook for his personal heroism in his search for the North Pole. It goes without saying that there will be those who will champion Commander Peary's claim and will also introduce a resolution tendering him the thanks of Congress. Under the rules of the House such resolutions must be referred to a committee for consideration and it will be there where the friends of the two explorers will fight the question out.

Those familiar with congressional matters predict that the outcome will be the passage of a single resolution giving the thanks of Congress to both Dr. Cook and Commander Peary, and presenting them with gold medals suitably inscribed.

The bitter feeling already engendered and rapidly growing and the position taken by the National Geographical Society will result in a postponement of the passage by Congress of a resolution until after a congressional investigation to determine the merit of the claims set forth by the explorers.

MRS. PEARY LEAVES FOR SYDNEY, CHEERED BY HOST OF FRIENDS

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 9.—Mrs. Robert E. Peary left Portland at 11:10 a. m. to-day with her daughter and little son, to meet her husband at Sydney, C. B.

They are accompanied by E. H. Rood, a friend of the family. Mr. Rood will shield Mrs. Peary and her family from the questions of curious ones who seek to press their interviews upon them.

Mrs. Peary, her seven-year-old son Robert, and her eighteen-year-old daughter Marie, started from Eagle Island, South Harpswell, yesterday afternoon in a motor boat. The trip to Portland took two hours. Mrs. Peary used the time to read telegrams and letters which had come in on the noon mail. There were so many of them that she was in Portland before she had read all the messages.

They planned to spend last night at the home of Mrs. Chase on Spring street, who had been at Eagle Island with them. But so many reporters and others called that Mrs. Peary, Marie and Robert fled to the seclusion of the Everett Chambers, where they put up for the night.

Master Robert was the first one of the family up to-day. After breakfast Mrs. Peary went shopping, while Miss Marie took Robert to the barber shop. She left him at the shop and called for him later. Then the son and daughter rejoined their mother and returned to the Everett Chambers. Later they left in a taxicab for the Union Station.

At the station a large number of people, who knew Mrs. Peary, and an equally large number who did not, pressed about the family group. Mrs. Peary was warmly congratulated by her friends on the new fame her husband had gained.

They will arrive at Sydney Saturday. Commander Peary is expected there Sunday from Labrador.

Last night Mayor Leighton and the Portland Board of Aldermen, with the Mayor of South Portland, conferred to arrange a reception to Peary on his arrival here.

Mayors' Congratulation.

Mayors Leighton of Portland and Hamilton of South Portland, to-day sent this joint telegram to Commander Peary:

"Sister cities of your native days join in sincere and hearty congratulations on your achievement. City Councils last night authorized joint movement for your reception on your arrival here. What evening can ya spend with us?

It is planned, if Commander Peary will only indicate the time, to give him a banquet and reception in the Portland Auditorium.

GERMAN SCIENTIST SAYS COOK WOULD NOT DARE TO FAKE

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—Herr Raschin, custodian of the Berlin Geographical Institute and a member of the Drygalski expedition, said to-day:

"Neither I nor most of the other German geographers can understand why the English scholars have attacked Cook.

"Peary, Cagni and Nansen reached the highest altitudes alone, or accompanied only by a few Eskimos. Their measurements were taken by one person alone, and it is consequently of little importance whether the bystanders were white men or Eskimos, since no witness would be in a position to verify the measurements or determine whether or not they had been correctly made.

"It would be extremely audacious of Dr. Cook to declare he had found the Pole, owing to the fact that Peary was out for the same purpose and would be able to contradict Cook's claims, if they were false when he returned to civilization. Cook affirms there is no land at the North Pole. Positive information proving there was land at the Pole would indicate that Cook was mistaken."

NEED NOT HURRY TO THE CAPITAL, SAYS WINTHROP

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Replying this morning to the statement made by Mrs. Peary, wife of Commander Robert E. Peary, at Rockland, Me., in which she said her husband would hasten to Washington as soon as he landed for the purpose of reporting to the Navy Department, acting Secretary of War Winthrop said that he knew of no reason why Commander Peary should hurry here. "He has no official report to make," continued Mr. Winthrop. "Of course, he probably will report to the department that he has discovered the Pole, but I know of no reason why he should come to Washington immediately."

COOK GONE FROM SHIP BUT 3 DAYS, DECLARES SAILOR

LIVERPOOL, Eng., Sept. 9.—The Post to-day publishes an interview with John Barclay, a cooper employed here, who asserts that he sailed on an Arctic journey with Dr. Cook in the steamer Dublin, from Ravkjavik, Iceland, in May, 1906. After a voyage of eighteen months, says Barclay, the vessel became icebound north of Annootok.

Cook disembarked and started across the ice with Eskimos, fourteen sleds and 100 dogs. Cook was absent from the ship only three days, according to Barclay. He took the Dublin flag and returned without it. The crew understood that he had reached the Pole, Barclay said the crew neither saw nor heard anything of the Peary expedition.

RUSSIAN ROBBERS GETS HAUL OF $40,000

SAMARA, Russia, Sept. 9.—A band of robbers, masked and armed with bombs and revolvers, attacked the post office at Miass, and after killing the night watchman and three policemen looted the office and escaped with $40,000. Two others were wounded in the fighting. The robbers cut the telegraph wires and fled up the track on a locomotive. After traveling some miles they stopped and disappeared into the woods.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

JOHNSON SHOULD BEAT KAUFMAN IN COAST BOUT

STRAIGHT DOPE
FOR SPORT FANS

THIS IS THE DAY SOMETHING IS liable to come off that will end all this idiotic talk about bringing the heavyweight championship back to the white race. Take it from me that a white man who fights a negro wipes out the color line so far as he is concerned, and has nothing on the brunette in the way of social ethics. Al Kaufman and Jack Johnson look very much the same tint to me this morning. If Kaufman should win—and, believe me, he has a chance—all these pin heads who have been bleating themselves hoarse about race equality, will get up on their hind legs and roar loudly for Jack off. If it will keep them quiet, I hope the white man will win, if for no other reason.

HERE IS THE WAY I DOPE OUT the fight, and if you buy the late sporting edition of the AMERICAN you'll find out whether I have excelsior in my dome or not, for no other paper in Boston to-night will print the result of the bout. It is a ten-round mill, and Johnson, while being much the faster and cleverer man, cannot put Kaufman out in the distance. On the other hand Kaufman is there with a wallop like a mule's kick and if he lands it there will be no black champion after the referee has finished counting. It is a question in my mind whether or not he can land it, and the one best bet of the day is that the fight will end in a draw.

IT IS PLEASANT TO KNOW ONE has not lived in vain, and I'm feeling pretty comfortable myself on this point, as witness this letter which reached me yesterday. And, by the way, this is not the only man I've helped to get a vacation this year. A friend of mine who occupies his spare time making a hand book is also spending his time and money in the Maine Summer resorts, and a close examination of some of these plunks he is blowing so liberally would disclose my initials bitten into them. Oh, yes, I'm sticking pretty close to the office myself these days, and still wearing a straw hat. Here is one man made happy:

Straight Dope:

Hey, You Kid, I am in Sanford on my vacation, thanks to you and Bud Fisher. This is the Dope. I have been straining along with Mutt for some time, and got up for a little bunch of that "sweep" stuff, and also got quite handsomely bold on some crazed something or other I've forgotten the name of. Thanks to you Dope and "Perky" Fisher. This makes a nice little start out of the old bankroll, and let me say that anybody who follows your dope is out of their own knob. . . . and this to Mutt and Bud. Put a little kick in me the next time you see him. I will close.

Yours, FATHER MUTT.

Sanford, Me., Sept. 7, 1909.

Dear Dope:

Let's in my secret. Perhaps you'll recall a letter from me some few weeks ago stating that several members of the association with which I'm connected got "massed up" a lot on the Johnson-Jeffries affair, and that some of me, you were the great John L. You very graciously replied that I was not much of a gladiator, and your statement apparently settled the dispute, and again peace reigns supreme. But Dope, old pal, away down in my own heart I didn't believe you, and so I put on a still hunt to fathom the mystery. The result is I received an answer. Forgive me if I say it showed you up. I'll never do it again, and if you say that Johnson and Jeffries are not going to battle, I will even overlook the fact that you called me a liar. Seldom looks from somebody else in Maine. Let's be friends in the bunch look. If the first letter in your name is "S" and the last letter "E" and there are five letters between, what might it spell? And by the way old man, how does the East agree with you? Am I wise?

With best wishes believe me, Sincerely yours,
HAROLD RANDOLPH FLAHERTY.

Taunton, Mass., Sept. 2, 1909.

Curses on my fatal beauty. I am discovered. I do remember your letter, Harold Randolph, and in answering it I told you the truth and I always do except when it suits me better to tell something else. However, your apology is accepted, and the East agrees with me pretty well. In fact I weigh within a few dollars a week of as much as I did in the West or South or wherever I came from. And say, Jack Dalton Flaherty, you sure are a sleuth for fair, but you are no Peary or Cook in this instance, for a lot of other people have discovered my identity by the simple method of calling at the BOSTON AMERICAN office and asking for me. I am visible there to the naked eye from seven to three every day except Monday, and the only callers I bar are prize fighters who want to tell me how it happened they didn't win.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Dear Sir—Can you please tell me who there is no amateur wearing in the American and National leagues? It looks as if the baseball powers played rank favorites. I have been to games in Boston and was not pleased with the umpiring, only to have the official say you next day emptied three to a dozen full of profits. If some of these big leaguers would only be fined a few times for their breaks it would not look so much like favoritism. Seeing like that does not go in the West. What a player does in baseball, especially while here a newspaper account of a game will often tell of errors which do not appear in the same column does not show. Please explain this if you can, and oblige,

Pretty hard to explain this, so I'll have to pass it up to the scorers. There is no question but what four errors in a game is just, and I have often remarked it myself. Boston is the most liberal of any city I know of in this way, and I have scored ball games in quite a few. I've tried to find out why, but I can't.

I'M GOING TO PRINT THIS FOR you, John, but I think your time would be better employed framing up some good games for your team. Besides that, it's a dangerous habit you are forming, beginning to write this kind of stuff so early in life.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Please put this in the Straight Dope column:

The Auburns are nifty.
The Auburns they are neat,
And when it comes to baseball,
They are very hard to beat.
JOHN BALL,
Cambridge, Manager of Auburns.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
The Somers A. C. of Dorchester claims the championship of the State for fourteen to fifteen-year-old teams and are willing to defend it against all comers. Manager Ed Sullivan has booked a game for September 18. The Somers have a great record having won twenty-one and lost one. The Somers are the champions of the State Dame Jrs. of South Boston and will play them September 11.

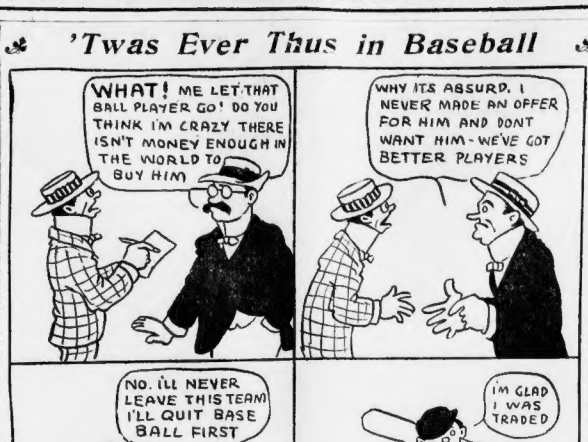
'Twas Ever Thus in Baseball



WHAT! ME LET THAT BALL PLAYER GO! DO YOU THINK I'M CRAZY THERE ISN'T MONEY ENOUGH IN THE WORLD TO BUY HIM
WHY ITS ASSURD. I NEVER MADE AN OFFER FOR HIM AND DONT WANT HIM - WE'VE GOT BETTER PLAYERS
NO. I'LL NEVER LEAVE THIS TEAM I'LL QUIT BASE BALL FIRST
I'M GLAD I WAS TRADED
BUT WHEN THE SEASON OPENED HE WAS IN A STRANGE UNIFORM JUST THE SAME.

TOMMY BURNS THINKS KAUFMAN HAS A CHANCE

By TAD.

Tommy Burns, in duping the Johnson-Kaufman fight to-day, says that in his opinion Kaufman has just as good a chance of winning as the colored champ has. Burns boxed with Kaufman quite a few times while he was training for Hart in Los Angeles, and got a good line on him. He said here in New York that he knocked Kaufman out in the gym with a punch in the stomach. Billy Delaney later denied the story, and said that Burns persisted in fighting Kaufman twice when the going was getting too tough.

However, regarding the fight, Burns has some interesting things to say. He dopes it this way:

"While I haven't an exalted opinion of Kaufman's ability, I reckon he should just about whip the big black man. He is a fine big youngster, as tall as Johnson, and in condition, almost up to the same weight. Then he is a white man, living in San Francisco, who will be fighting in his own city, and that counts in a big battle. He is a pretty clever boxer with a good right and a punch that should do for the black, if he gets it home, as it has done for other men no less men. His defence is by no means as good as Johnson's, but being a tall, big fellow, he can use a much longer reach, and about that as smaller man would be dangerous close to, dangerous slow—the right opponent. He can get that on effectively with a shorter man than himself, but I shall be surprised if he scores a knock-out with it on Kaufman. Johnson is not a fast boxer, but in that respect there is not much to choose between him and the black. At first Kaufman was regarded as very slow, but he was not too slow to get through with men like Sheck and Flynn in a few rounds.

"Of course, on form it looks like Johnson winning, and the betting may be 3 to 1 against the white man, but I would like to have a share of it as I know both men. I have boxed with Kaufman, although not in public, and I believe the white lad will win. Kaufman is looked upon as something of a joke, going for championship honors. Well, I was regarded as a joke when I stood up against Marvin Hart, and the joke was on the other fellows when the fight had finished.

"A fight to a finish would have been better for Kaufman, but still I think he will manage to do the trick. Inside the ten, Kaufman carries a fine punch, and has got the ability to use it at times to put the issue beyond doubt. Yes, in all the circumstances, I regard Kaufman's chances as distinctly good, and I should like to have a share of the odds."

Sam Fenitz, the largest dash of chocolate that ever wore a pair of tights, is yearning for another battle. Every sporting man from New York to Frisco knows Sam and the jokes that have been pulled on him will never die. Sam is the gent who plastered himself with goosegrease the night he fought Joe Armstrong in Frisco, but forgot to grease his stomach. When Bob Fennick one on that spot Sam crawled right out of the ring and, turning, remarked: "Mr. Armstrong, you're no gentleman."

Sam is also the gent who fell on a soft spot another night and when the referee had counted "Nine, four out," Sam looked up and said: "I don't know who's the referee but I do, Mr. Referee."

On another occasion at Alec Gregg's old club on Sixth street, in Frisco, Sam quit again. When Alec turned over to count he got as far as eight when Sam arose: "Mr. Gregg, you can count a thousand, but ah won't move."

Everybody likes Sam, though. He's seven feet high when he's dressed and 300 pounds, but he can only fight at times. No one has ever been able to discover at just what time, but there are TIMES, says Sam.

HUNTING HAUNTED TREASURE—Two true stories of smuggling days. Three tales of befell ghosts. Short stories in the Sunday American.

TOURED TO SEATTLE.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Selby of Marietta, O., have arrived at Seattle in their Winton Six, having taken twenty-nine days for their overland journey from Pittsburg to the exposition city. On the trip Mr. Selby cleaned one spark plug, otherwise the motor never gave him a moment's trouble. From Seattle Mr. and Mrs. Selby will tour to Los Angeles and from there home by Salt Lake City.

FIRST FOOTBALL INJURY.

In yesterday's practice of the Somerville High School football team, the second day of the season, at Broadway field, Bob Garland, the halfback, dislocated his shoulder while falling on the ball. It is a peculiar coincidence that last season his brother, Ned Garland, the all-Interscholastic end, met with precisely the same injury in the same way.

SIRE OF EARLY SPEED.

Walnut Hall (2:08¾) can now be ranked as a remarkable sire of extreme early speed, for in addition to The Harvester (2:06¾), he has to his credit Sir Walnut (2:06¾), a winner at Cleveland, while at Goshen, N. Y., half-mile track, his three-year-old son Walnut Boy cut an aged trotter in 2:14¼, and was timed in 2:10 at Readville.

TO DECIDE K. OF C. TITLE.

The deciding game for the Knights of Columbus championship will be played Saturday, September 11, instead of September 18, as previously announced, so that Boston can Eagle grounds. The game, which is between the Medford Council, will figure out an aged trotter in 2:14¼, and was timed in 2:10 at Readville.

WON OVER 1,000 RACES.

Will and Sam Caton have arrived in this country from Russia, having headed the list of winning drivers in that country for the past season and won prizes aggregating over $1,000,000 in value. He has averaged 100 winning races a year for a period of ten years.

HOT NAMES FOR HORSES.

The produce of the mare Anna Almont evidently must be owned chiefly by a gentleman, or at least one that is fond of warm things. She is the dam of Red Pepper (2:11¼), Chauncey Pepper (2:12¼), Elrile Mustard (2:13¾), and another without a mark is named Cinnamon.

Is Touring New England.

Alexander T. Brown of the Brown & Lipe gear Works, Syracuse, N. Y., is making an extensive tour through New England in his Valveless American Simplex car.

Mr. Brown is probably one of the leading authorities on automobile construction in the country, aside from this he is prominently identified with one of the leading typewriter companies of the world.

Baseball News and Notes

The Dixon and Cincinnati have applied for territory to play the whole game for September 15 as part of a double header on Sunday, that day before.

The Cub players will put a bunch of extra money in the pot that is to be played for on the league races. If the flag goes to Pittsburg the wages from all go to the rooter and manage in a series of games. . . .

Outfielder Mebane of the New Britain team of the Connecticut League, who has been purchased by Manager Clarke outfield of the Cincinnati Reds, will report to the latter club to-day.

Pantzie, the former St. Paul of the Penn football team, who joined the Reds, He has been catching for Altoona.

The major league drafting season, which opened last week, will end until October 15. During the period selections by draft may be made by major league clubs as follows: Class A players in Class A, class B, $2500; in Class C, $1000; in class D, $500. Class A clubs cannot draft from September 15 to October 1, from lower classes, players in Class B, from lower in Class C, $400, and in Class D, $300. Players drafted after September 15 will not be paid, in Class C, $400, and in Class D, $300.

The Class B drafting season will be from October 15 to November 1. . . .

Rumors of the ball players who are to be here next year are already current. Connie Mack, "That is about the time that good ones and weeks look bad to give out a boast."

Eli Cate, a former Minneapolis pitcher and later of the Winona baseball team in the Wisconsin Minnesota League, has reported to the manager of the Milwaukee American Association team for duty.

Redbank seems to have gone go far to the ball as he was good at it. Last year Jimmy Burke had his arm in that New York game, when his slouch of a fielder muffed a throw, thought he had failed to be right. His defeat by the Dodgers recently was the first time the Brooklyn Club has beaten him in over two years.

In a letter to a friend, secretary Frederick George of the Province Baseball Club of Providence, R. I., is going from and carry man on it is working in perfect harmony. We have the American pennant cinched and we are already training on the 1910 season. Jake Stahl is in Class B. Every one of the old Nats and Antonio when we come back next spring.

BOSTON AMERICANS DOUBLE

Permanent and Strong Is the Tie That Binds

By DOROTHY DIX.

In the delightful comedy that Mr. Belasco is now presenting, the query is propounded as to whether the average middle-aged married couple would stay married if they had an opportunity to slip the fetters that bind them together without creating gossip and scandal.

This is a most interesting and human question and one within the range of the experience of every Benedict and Benedictine, for if we married people told the truth—which doesn't furnish our ideal as a general thing—we should all have to admit that there have been times and seasons when even the happiest married of us have looked at the partner of our bosoms and wondered what made us do it, and if we did, why on earth we picked out that particular individual for a running mate.

Undoubtedly, in the majority of cases matrimony and monotony are synonymous terms. Also, too uninterrupted and continuous doses of the same person's society pall upon one's taste in the course of years.

Little personal peculiarities and ways that we have to put up with every day of our lives, sooner or later, get on our nerves, and so the hour inevitably arrives when Darby and Joan side in their hearts the thought that they are tired of each other.

The Best of a Bad Bargain

Being respectable church-going folks they say nothing of their appalling discovery, but none the less Darby writhes under Joan's boring nagging, and Joan wonders what life would be with a man whose thoughts weren't bounded by his stomach and the dry goods business, and who would do something more than grunt by way of answer when his wife tried to talk to him.

And both Darby and Joan feel—though they won't admit it to themselves—that if Providence should see fit to remove the noble, but afflicting, being to whom he, or she, is united he or she could give an inspiring example of heroically borne bereavement.

Undoubtedly if there was a bargain sale of odorless divorces eighty out of a hundred middle aged couples would not be the place trying to get one. Undoubtedly, also, in less than a week half of those who got divorces would bring them back, saying they didn't need them, or that they didn't fit, or that they had found out that they didn't suit their particular case, and that they didn't want them and wouldn't have them, anyway.

It Becomes a Habit

The truth is, that the bond between people who have been married for ten, or twenty, or thirty years is much stronger than they know. The fire of passion and of romance may have burned itself out, but in their places there has been established the habit of a dual life together that makes one as lost without the other as an old dray horse when his collar mate is taken from it.

There is no stronger tie in the world than this habit of affection. It is what makes us fond of the people that we have known all our lives, although in reality they have nothing in common with the bang tiling upon. It is what makes us interested in the small beer conversation of old friends and old neighbors, who are driveling bores to strangers.

This makes it possible for husbands and wives to endure stupidity in each other, to put up with a wide lack of courtesy, and to overlook disgusting little personal idiosyncrasies that would drive anybody else mad, and make anybody else flee from close association with them as they would fly from the plague.

Another thing that holds a middle-aged married couple together is that they have become used to each other's little ways, and in one sense or another have become necessary to each other. Darby may be moon to himself that his fat, grizzled Joan has ceased to thrill him, but he is not insensible to her being the best housekeeper in the community and a master hand at cooking.

Joan may have a few heartaches over Darby not being the hero of her young dreams, or she may have to shut her eyes to the fact that he sometimes sags off the straight and narrow path, for she can't deny that he is a good provider and that when he is at home he is the most genial and companionable of men.

Both Darby and Joan have their regrets over their smashed ideals of matrimony, but in the same breath Darby wonders what he should do if he didn't have good, kind Joan to cook and mend for him, and Joan shudders at the thought of what would become of her if she didn't have Darby to work for her and support her, and so they both feel that their right to the yoke of matrimony and yoke mating mutually comfortable either.

The Tie of Comradship.

There is, too, the tie of comradeship and partnership that the years establish between a husband and wife. They two have been all things together. They have had a common purse, common joys, common sorrows. They have struggled together, together they have rejoiced over successes and went over defeats.

"Together they have built above cradles, and watched by sick beds and turned away from coffins. There is not a memory nor a hope that they do not share together, and this makes each other the only thing that no other human being can be.

This is what holds the most unhappily married people together, even if they could divorce each other as definitely as it is done in Mr. Belasco's amusing play.

Everybody would jump at the have to free-dom at first, and then we should all soon speak kindly to each other, sheepfold, for the truth is that matrimony is a decorating process, and having been tamed, we lose our taste for the wild and do not know what to do with liberty.

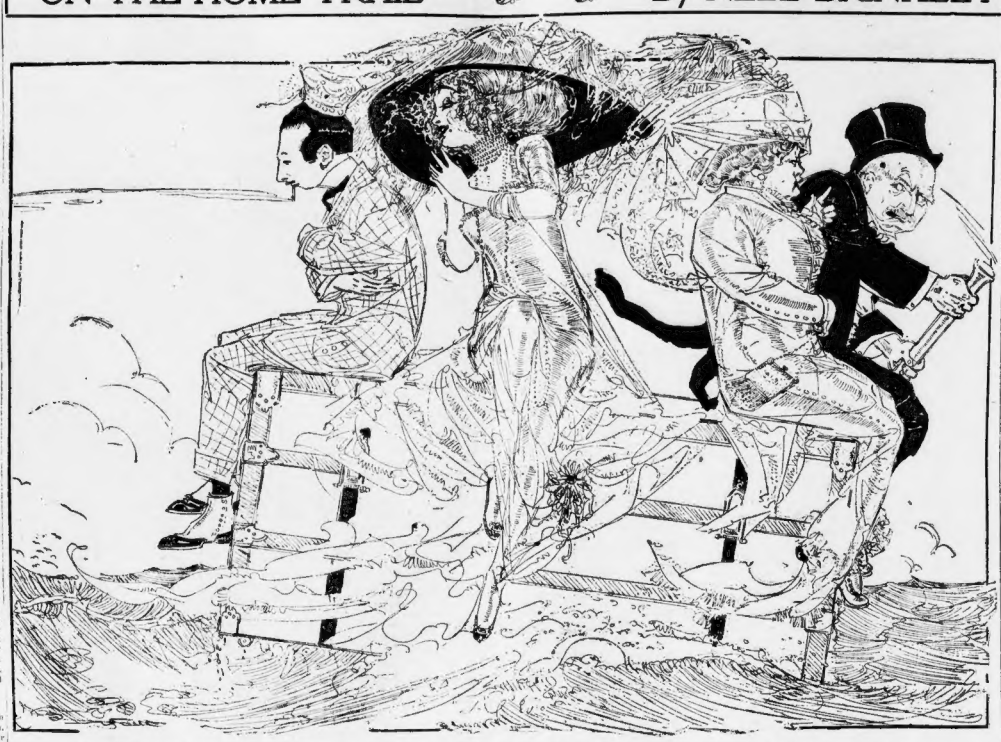
"ON THE HOME TRAIL" By NELL BRINKLEY



One little procession that's the well-bred and smart thing, with the latest in Dukes, is this gold-bound one with an American heiress aboard.

"SAILING—sailing—over the ocean blue." Every day they bump in—the folks from the "other side," paddling their little trunks and bubbling with the wisdom and the marvel of the Old World and the finds they're lugging home.

One little procession that's quite the utterly proper and well-bred and smart thing, with quite the ultra find under their arms, is this fat and gold-bound one with an American heiress aboard.

There's a scowling, sniffing millionaire Dad with suspicion in his eye, hurling indignant remarks at his baby-girl and cracking his fists till the sparks fly at the little earl she's cried to have.

There's the little, comfy, good-eater Mamma with the wealth of the Hindus around her plump pink neck and rising and falling on the tide of her bosom, with eyes that have stared so faithfully at the dazzle of a coronet that wherever they turn now they see a green and gold fiery blot, as sun-gazers do; she beams on her beauty of a girl and the sulky little donkey with the elephantine nose and the retiring chin, dangling his meagre legs alongside. She wrestles with the snarling Dad and gives him a few pointers under her breath, and breathes a sigh from the depths when she thinks of the Lady-faces at home turned up to watch her sons in the land of the Ramping Lion. But first they must bring their spoil home to show him off.

And there's the little Beauty—the old man's poor little Baby-girl—a devotee, a fanatic, a willing sacrifice to the Lion, with eyes blinded by dreams—dreams—all dreams that won't ever come true! If she only knew, silly little Canary-bird!

But she clasps her white little hands and turns the light of imaginative eyes on the brainless little noble a-dangling his spats (the limit of his abilities), and doesn't remember that she has brains and a heart and that they'll both call for a pal and there won't be any answer.

She holds up the Cup and sees the fine light in it and dreams of the liquid gem 'twill be to drink—but it's her own tears it holds and she'll drink 'em, bitter, before the light of the honeymoon is gone!

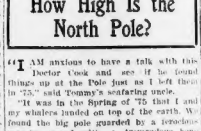
NELL BRINKLEY.

How High Is the North Pole?

"I AM anxious to have a talk with this Doctor Cook and see if he found things up at the Pole just as I left them in '75," said Tommy's seafaring uncle.

"It was in the Spring of '75 that I and my whalers landed on top of the earth. We found the big pole guarded by a ferocious monster armed with a tremendous two-sword. I at once gave battle to the critter and after a fierce duel despatched him with my trusty cutlass. It was too cold to hang around long, so after climbing the pole and flying Old Glory at the very top, we sang the 'Star Spangled Banner' and sailed homeward."

"How high was the pole?" queried Tommy.



"Well, I can't just remember," replied Uncle Jake, "but I know it measured sixty feet around, and that the rope which I fastened to the top and tied at the bottom, after winding it four times around the pole on my way down, was just 300 feet long."

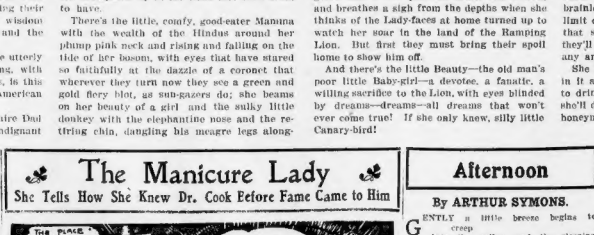
Can you prove the truth of Uncle Jake's story by figuring out just how tall the North Pole must be?

One hundred prize puzzle books will be awarded among those who send best answers to the Puzzle Editor, in care of this paper.

HOW TO STOP NOISE—The Sunday American will contain an intensely interesting article on the unique "basics of silence" soon to rise in America.

The Manicure Lady

She Tells How She Knew Dr. Cook Before Fame Came to Him



"The magnetic pole prevents any messages from being sent out."

"I SAY Mister Cook has found the North Pole," said the Manicure Lady.

"I see he says he has," said the cynical Head Barber. "I don't believe all that press stuff. But whether it's so or not, Cook must have a great advance man."

"It ain't fair to doubt a great man like Mister Cook," said the Manicure Lady. "He was in our shop, where I was working, in Brooklyn, to have his nails did. I had just broke into the business, and I feeling plenty confused and embarrassed, but this great explorer, like all great men, put me at my ease off the reel.

"He began telling me about a trip that he took up in them Arctic regions, and the way he described the aurora borealises and the polar bears was enough to make you turn off the electric fires.

"It is truly wonderful, Mister Cook says, to see the violet and indigo and orange and yellow rays playing up and down on a horizon which broods over a land of mystery. I was telling father about it, and he said he wished brother Wilfred would go up there and freeze."

Magnetic Pole and Wiring

"I wish he would myself, so you would get through talking about him," said the Head Barber. "If this fellow Cook really dug up the Pole, though, why didn't he send some word of it long ago?"

The Manicure Lady looked at George pityingly.

"My goodness!" she said. "Don't you know that the latitudes and the longitudes is so different up there that you can't send word at all? One of the gents that was in here yesterday told me all about it.

"He says that the explorers have to figure on the magnetic pole, which is on an iceberg floating around somewhere south of the real Pole. The magnetic Pole is so full of electricity that nobody could send a telegram or a 'phone message there to save their lives.

"He told me a lot of other interesting stuff, too. He said that he used to know Cook when they were babies together. He told me that all the kids used to call Cook 'Frozen Face' at school, because he never laughed when a kid got hit with a baseball or beaten by the teacher. Cook was always a bright kid, he said.

"I suppose you will never get old enough," said the Head Barber, "not to believe everything you are told. I should think that a girl with the training manicure girls usually get would get wise after a while."

The Green of Youth

"I don't see where being a doubting Tom you ever got anything," said the Manicure Lady. "If you have always been so wise, how is it that you aren't around in your yacht, instead of dodging moles on a customer's face?

"I may be a little green, but it is the green of youth, and not the mildew of age, and when the day comes that I can't take any interest in them scientific reports, like telling the North Pole or Ty Cobb's batting average, then I want to be cremated and kept pretty.

"Just think what it means for this great country to discover the top of the world. And just think what it will mean for Mister Cook. After he gets back he will clean up more money in lectures than Mark Twain and Billy Sye ever dreamed of. I suppose he will be too proud to come and have his nails did, now.

"But even if he is swelled up, I won't blame him. I will always think that I knew him before he was famous.

"As the poet once wrote:

'We can live without Art, we can live without books,
But civilized men cannot live without Cooks.'"

Afternoon

By ARTHUR SYMONS.

GENTLY a little breeze begins to creep
Into the valley, and the sleeping trees
Are stirred and breathe a little in their sleep,
And nod, half wakened, to the breeze.

Cool, little, quiet shadows wander out
Across the fields and dapple with dark trails
The snake-gray road coiled stealthily about
The green hill climbing from the vales.

And fainter, in this cooler peace of things,
My brooding thoughts, a scattered flock grown few,
Withdrawn upon their melancholy wings,
Float farther off against the blue.

Up to Date Jokes.

"Hips, curves, embonpoint! Everything has had to go."

"Yes, woman is pretty near down to the original rib."

Brenda—All right, Dad; and Muriel had better learn German, because she can garble best.

"Those Summer engagements seldom result in matrimony."

"Perhaps it is just as well. Distinctions would be bound to come. Every girl on vacation manages to look pretty, whether she is or not, and every fellow certainly acts rich."

"It is evident that the tariff provisions are coming right home to us," remarked the cheerful boarder.

"How is that?" inquired the ribbon salesman.

"Why, replied the cheerful boarder as he frowned reproachfully at his knife, it looks to me as if this sirloin steak was the 'leather joker' in this disguise."

"Please, sir," said the office boy, "me gran'mudder's dead, an' I want de afternoon off."

"Johnny," exclaimed his employer, severely, "do you know where little boys go who tell lies?"

"Yes, sir, to de ball game," replied Johnny, unblushingly.

"My dear, the bored girl has quit."

"Well, that's all right. Just drop a line to your mother inviting her to visit us. She'll do the housework until we can get another maid."

"Why worry about the children?"

"I can't help it."

If Things Were as They Really Ought to Be

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

IF things were as they ought to be every woman in the world would be happily married and engaged in her God-given and divine right task of rearing a family.

But, mind, I say she would be "happily" married, not merely drudging along doing her duty in a half-hearted way, simply because it was her duty.

The man would be her mate, her one man of all the world.

Then there would be no drudgery—simply pure joy in making a home for him and the children born of their perfect love.

Some day in the far future life will be so arranged that woman will do the work she is most fitted for. At present, if she is a mother, she must also be a housekeeper.

Many women are natural born mothers, who have little taste for domestic work.

Divide Work Properly

A man may be an excellent father and yet thoroughly suited with his work in life; he is free to follow his natural vocation, professional or otherwise. But man will pass by the girl who is fitted in every way to be his wife and marry some little doll who will be a burden on him the rest of his days.

Man loves woman, but he loves her in what he considers her proper sphere, and he does not want her to step one little inch out of it.

"You shall be the mother of children and you shall keep house," he says. "Is not that enough for any woman? What more do you want, you strange, incomprehensible creature?"

But man forgets that with the advance of time woman has advanced also. She will always by instinct be maternal, but modern science can teach her to be a wise mother as well as a loving one.

There are thousands of old maids who would make the best and tenderest wives and mothers in the world.

Men Silly Geese

If men were not such geese in their foolish pursuit of mere beauty of face, there would be far more happy marriages than there are at present. A motherhood and the cook stove seem to be eternally matched.

Don't be foolish, girls, and take these words as encouragement to marry the first man who asks you. By "happily" married, I mean married to a man whom you love and respect and find absolutely congenial, a man who will be your best friend as well as your husband.

Some day the work will be properly divided, the natural born cooks, and they are many, will attend to the cooking, the artist will be free to cultivate her talent, the musician hers, and yet all may be mothers doing their duty by their children and men. Everything will go on in grand equal scale. Woman will have a vote when that happy day arrives.

And that is why I say that if things were as they ought to be every woman would be happily married. Of course, there are always exceptions, and some women are better unmarried, but they are mighty rare.

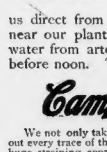
SPLENDID FAIRY STORY, told in a most fascinating way. All children should read it or hear it read. Given free with the Sunday American.



Poor little Mabel,
Sent from the table,
Pinafored the can
And cried for the label.

A dollar a plate would not buy better tomato soup than Campbell's

We use only full-grown red-ripe tomatoes, ripened on the vines—luscious juicy perfect specimens. They are picked at sunrise—when cool and fresh; brought to us direct from the New Jersey gardens—right near our plant; washed five times in running water from artesian wells, and made into soup before noon. That's the story of

Campbell's Tomato Soup

We not only take out all the skin and seeds but we strain out every trace of the coarse indigestible core-fibre through our huge straining apparatus, built specially for this purpose, with a screen as fine as pin-points. There is no other way to do this important work so thoroughly.

We use only the clear thick juice. And we retain all the fresh natural flavor and aroma.

That is why Campbell's Tomato Soup comes steaming to your table so fragrant and spicy; smooth as cream; and with the most delicious smacking relish you ever tasted.

Try it for dinner today. That is the only way to know how good it is. And we make 20 other kinds, all of the same perfect quality.

If not satisfied the grocer returns your money.

Do you know any fairer way than that?

Why not enjoy one of these delicious soups today?

21 kinds 10c a can

Tomato, Asparagus, Mock Turtle, Chicken, Mulligatawny, Tomato-Okra, Clam Chowder, Clam Bouillon, Mutton Broth, Celery, Beef, Vermicelli Tomato, Chicken Gumbo (Okra), Julienne, Asparagus, Consomme, Pea, Bouillon, Printanier, Pepper Pot

Just add hot water, bring to a boil, and serve.

COOK PREPARING PROOFS OF POLAR VOYAGE

On Trial Before World, Explorer Working Hard on Data to Refute Peary's Claim That He Never Left Land in the Arctic.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 9.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook is on trial to-day. With the world as his judge, he is calm under the harsh criticism and attack of Commander Peary. He knows that he must prove his claims, and his friends declare that he will do so.

Cook was up at 6 o'clock to-day working hard upon an exhaustive report which he says will come as a reply to all his critics the world over. Steps are being taken to bring his two Eskimo companions into the scientific world, take them to America and put them before the cross-examining board of scientists and geographers.

There has been an almost imperceptible change of sentiment here and in some quarters which is worrying Dr. Cook. The American says that a great deal of his data is not at hand, but from memory and from what he has with him he will compile a reply containing facts and figures by which he hopes to establish claims beyond all shadow of doubt.

Even the dogs used by Cook may be placed as exhibits before the scientific tribunal.

"Didn't Take His Eskimos."

While Dr. Cook to-day took time to reiterate his statement, "I know I am right and right must prevail," his program nevertheless was a busy one. It is unlikely now that Dr. Cook will lecture before the Belgian Geographical Society, although an invitation has been extended to him to meet Dr. Lecointe of the Brussels observatory in private audience. The reason given for the tentative cancellation of the lecture was that the Belgian scientists wish to wait for more developments before carrying out the engagement.

Dr. Cook was further besieged by correspondents to-day and made further reply to the international criticism of his story. He said:

"In justice to others, I must refute the statement made by Commander Peary that I took his Eskimos and stores. I credit Peary's statement that he found the North Pole, but I must decline to engage in a controversy with him which would be undignified and which would lessen the general belief in my own statements. The Eskimos are wanderers, and I paid them liberally for their services. The Eskimos are owned neither by Commander Peary nor by Dr. Cook; they are their own masters.

"Peary took my provisions in my absence, telling the custodian that he would equip a relief ship to try to find me. I believe, however, that Peary was actuated by honorable motives, for I had been missing so long that many thought me dead.

Will Show the Data.

"I stand by my statement that I discovered the Pole. I reiterate my intention of placing all my data, notes, journal, observations and diary before a body of purely scientific men for their decision, and I would await with a calm, undisturbed conscience the result of their deliberations. The charge that I did not leave the land I made is foolish. In reply to that I will say that I am organizing at my own expense an expedition even now to go North and find the two Eskimos who accompanied me to the Pole, bring them back to civilization and let them tell their story to the world in their own way.

"Their story will corroborate mine in every detail, and, while their knowledge of science is small, sufficient weight would be given by their simple and truthful statements to bear out my own claims.

"I ask the world to believe in me. I ask the world to wait a little while before passing final judgment. I shall soon furnish evidence—scientific evidence of an irrefutable character—and I am confident that, when this is placed before the world, the great jury will find for their verdict that I really did plant the flag at the important development so far.

earth's apex and that I really did discover the North Pole."

Cook Compares Speed.

The astonishing speed of 261.2 miles daily for nine days made by Commander Peary, according to his figures, was pointed out by Cook and his supporters to-day as the first fact in the chain of corroborative evidence by which he hopes to reinstate himself in the world of dazzling science.

Commander Peary's summary shows that he made the final 250 miles of the Pole in thirteen days. Cook's claim that he made 220 miles over the ice in fifteen days was met with ridicule.

"Peary's figures are not incredible," declared Dr. Cook this afternoon. "They could easily have been made practical. Peary found the route smooth which he undoubtedly did. On his return to Cape Columbia he must have averaged more than twenty-six miles a day, as the trip was made in sixteen days, and it is probable that several days will have to be deducted on account of the open water.

"This is no controversy. The point I wish to bring out is that Peary made greater speed than I did.

"Then, too, if my last account was disappointing, as some of my critics have said, what must Peary's first detailed contribution to the world prove, after describing my journey in more less detail. Peary gives nothing but astronomy. Peary will undoubtedly follow this with the necessary algorithm, lest (as I intend to do).

"This is the first personal criticism of importance in which Cook has indulged. The comparison of time to-day is the latest important development so far.

Ready to Meet Charges.

Which of us, badgered daily and hourly by demands to prove that we are not scoundrels, even though our proofs to the contrary are admittedly far across the sea, but would grow restive at last? Life would be impossible if we were all liable to be held up every moment by any chance caller, demanding that we state our business at the nets or produce our marine certificate.

Before a competent tribunal, when arraigned by responsible accusers, Cook is ready to meet any and every charge brought against him, his honor as a man and his reputation as an explorer, but not before any Tom, Dick and Harry who may come along with telegrams or telephone messages reeking with slaughter. Cook refuses to be pestered any longer by these eliminate and libelers who wish to be judge, jury and prosecutor, all in one person and who insist on treating the distinguished American explorer as if he were worse than a horse thief.

Surprised if Peary Succeeded.

In the absence of particulars as to what is claimed by Peary, the Danish authorities are dumb. Commander Sverding, former conductor of Nansen's Fram, who opened up the line of western country through which Cook made his trek for the Pole, is taciturn. When asked if he knew Peary, he replied:

"Not much, but enough."

"What do you think of his claim that he reached the Pole?"

"How can we think any thing until we know something? He may have reached the Pole. If so it will be a surprise. Peary has been trying altogether for twenty-three years and hitherto has not had much luck. Now, after all these failures he may have got through, but I never expected it. It is very surprising. We must wait to hear how he did it."

And more than this no one will say.

I wish to express the indebtedness that every representative American feels to Minister Egan, whose hospitality, geniality and unusual helpfulness have endeared him to all. He has been an elder brother to Cook and an unfailing resource to every American journalist. He has inherited the genial traditions of Minister O'Brien and has not impaired his heritage.

Cook will leave Copenhagen this afternoon after Flushing in the Scandinavian American liner Oscar II, which will call at Flushing especially to take him aboard. He will arrive at New York on September 21. Cook's worst enemies admit that he spent more than a year in the Arctic regions with no civilized companions, braving death from cold and famine like all other Arctic explorers, with the spur of financial gain. After his self imposed ordeal he ought not on returning to civilization be treated as a pickpocket even by those who really question the accuracy of his conclusions that he had reached the Pole.

But day after day, since the admitted rescuer of Arctic sojourn and his residence to dare all for the purse of Arctic exploration, Cook is assailed with the cruelest imputations by anonymous writers who never have given any proof of their bravery suffered in the cause of science or any other cause for which word he says he twisted or misrepresented. Every hour brings cablegrams and telegrams and importunate callers, demanding that he shall leave and then answer this challenge with incontrovertible proof, produced on the spot.

"Are you an infamous liar or not?"

SVERDRUP IS ANTI-PEARY

LONDON, Sept. 9.—In an interview with the Copenhagen correspondent of the Express, Captain Sverdrup is reported to have said:

"Peary will never admit that the Pole has been reached before he got there. He is the most jealous of men and thinks he has a lease on the Pole.

"He is sure to be a keen, sharp adversary, and is not afraid of using any means Peary's treatment of myself when we met in Smith's Sound is well known and marks the man.

CHINESE STUDENT TO MARRY HERE

The marriage of Eu Ming Ho, a Chinese student at the Harvard Law School, and Miss Frances M. Wong of Honolulu, will take place in one of the Protestant Episcopal churches of Boston to-morrow. Miss Wong is the daughter of Wing King Wong, a sugar planter in Hawaii. The couple, who are natives of Canton, China, were betrothed in their childhood, almost having seen one another. They first met at Honolulu, while Eu was on his way to the United States. Each is 22 years old and a Christian convert. Eu expects to be appointed an instructor in the imperial university at Pekin. Miss Wong has been travelling to perfect her knowledge of the world.

"GOD'S WILL" SAYS MOTHER

ELMIRA, N. Y., Sept. 9.—"It's God's will; I will try to bear it bravely," exclaimed Mrs. Mary Marvin, mother of Ross G. Marvin, the young scientist who met death on the Peary expedition, when she received a dispatch from her daughter in Wilkesbarre, Pa., to-day, confirming the news. Marvin was Peary's first assistant and a professor in Cornell University. He was born in Elmira, N. Y., in 1880, and worked his way through college. Commander Peary wrote Mrs. Marvin's daughter to break the news to her.

INDEPENDENT SHOE WORKERS TO MEET

LYNN, Sept. 9.—A mass meeting to boom the United Shoe Workers of America, the organization of independent shoe workers, just completed, will be held Sunday, in Lasters' Hall, Andrew street. Fifteen of the twenty-five locals will be represented. Among the speakers will be National organizer Arvid Eland.

LEATHER MAN "BROKE"?

Arthur Bartlett, a Marblehead leather merchant, doing business at No. 40 Lincoln street, Boston, was petitioned into involuntary bankruptcy to-day in the United States court, at the instance of creditors. The creditors who filed petitions are Charles A. Alexander, $1,379; Samuel J. Basker, $153, and Avery N. Lawry, $485.97. These men allege that Bartlett made an assignment for the benefit of creditors on Sept. 1 to George F. Bean of Woburn.

MT. KINLEY CONTROVERSY

TACOMA, Wash., Sept. 9.—Belmore Brown, who was one of Dr. Cook's party the year the doctor says he ascended Mount McKinley, said to-day:

"After making an attempt from the Southern slopes of the mountain and failing, our party went to Glory Hole. We all started down the Susitna river, some of us going off on hunting trips, others stocking for the outside.

"Cook went back with two companions and, going up another branch of the river, made a second dash for the summit on the Southwest slope. He claimed that he and one of the men who accompanied him reached the top. I notice that the men who dispute that he reached the summit are persons who were now with him, and consequently what they have to say should not carry great weight.

A dispatch from Hamilton, Mont., says: "Ed Barrill says that he and Dr. Cook were the only ones who made the ascension of Mount McKinley in 1906. He refused to make any statement except to say that when Dr. Cook returns he will make a statement regarding his association with the explorer."

TRAILING A DERELICT.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Revenue cutters on the New England coast have been instructed by the Treasury Department to search for and if possible destroy a capsized vessel 150 feet long, reported recently in the track of ocean steamships. The derelict was last reported by a steamer Florida.

"ONLY AN ACCIDENT BARRED WELLMAN FROM DISCOVERY"

PARIS, Sept. 9.—Melvin Vaniman, chief engineer of Walter Wellman's Polar expedition, who has arrived here, says that "only a fool accident prevented the dirigible America from reaching the Pole."

"The balloon, which is practically uninjured, is being brought back to Paris.

TRAVIS LONE EASTERNER IN GOLF TOURNEY

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—With the National Golf championship at the Chicago Golf Club just over, only one of the sixty-five Eastern representatives catered in the qualifying round are left to struggle in an attempt to bring the title back to the Atlantic seaboard.

This lone survivor is none other than the redoubtable, thrice-former American and once British champion, Walter J. Travis of Garden City, Long Island. He must run the gauntlet of three matches with Chicago golfers to enter the final championship. His first opponent, Robert A. Gardner of Hinsdale, the Yale athlete whom he meets in the thirty-six hole match round today, may be his last, in so far as the hope of landing the 1910 title is concerned.

Thomas M. Sherman of Utica, N. Y., the son of the Vice-President of the United States, was removed in the second round when he lost a well-contested thirty-six hole contest to Albert Seckel of Riverside by four down and three to play.

Seckel will meet Charles Evans, Jr., the Western champion, today. The other survivors of the second round yesterday and their opponents today are former national champion H. Chandler Egan of Exmoor against W. Lawrence of Wheaton, runner-up to Egan for the National title over the Wheaton links in 1906, and Paul Hunter of Midlothian vs. his clubmate, former Western champion, Mason E. Phelps.

COACH M'CORMICK READY FOR WORK

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 9.—Head Coach Jim McCormick is here to begin preparations for the opening of the football season. Some of the candidates are already in, but formal practice will not begin until the day of the opening of Princeton University, September 22.

A GUIDELESS TROTTER.

Sarena, a boy gelding by Wild Rose, claimed to be the only guideless trotter in the world, recently trotted an exhibition mile at Belmont track in 2.10. Sarena was accompanied by two runners, and stepped the mile without the slightest sign of making a break, although there was a runner of each side of him and his owner was tapping him with a whip.

TUCKEY AND STEM TO BE RETURNED

Tom Tuckey, the southpaw pitcher, and Fred Stem, the tall first baseman, who have been doing good work for the Lynn team of the New England League, will be returned to the Boston Doves on Monday.

The Lynn team will have a busy time next week playing post series games. On Monday and Tuesday Jesse Burkett will bring his men from Worcester to the Shoe City, and on Wednesday it is reported that the Boston Doves will be able to get away and give the New England leaguers an argument. Waterbury will be the attraction for the remaining three days. On Monday, the 20th, the Lynn team will play at Waterbury.

BE BROUGHT HER UP LIKE A RAILROAD!— Why, Harriman, of course! Read it in the Sunday American.

FULLY GIVES PERELLI TOUGH ARGUMENT

Jack Fully, the Pennsylvania miner, gave John Perelli a tough argument at the Columbia last night, and the fact that he made the fighting Italian wrestler change his tactics and wrestle according to the rules proves that, although he lacked some twenty pounds of being as heavy as his opponent, he is a sturdy wrestler and knows the game. He met Perelli's rough house tactics in kind, and showed the Italian some tricks that he was not familiar with; but weight and strength told, and although Perelli lost the first bout for refusing to be good, he won the next two with hammerlock holds in both falls in 9 minutes 20 minutes respectively. It was a splendid match to watch, as the speed and agility of the miner offset for a time the building grit and superior weight of the Italian, who was there with all his old-time speed, aggressiveness and foxy work.

CAN BET ON PONIES.

By recent rulings in several Oklahoma courts there is not now in that state as anti-gambling law which prohibits betting on horseracing of any kind. While individuals cannot bet, they can form clubs and collect the money. In this way betting of any kind is illegal, including the laying of wagers on speed contests Oklahoma laws do not cover this.

KAUFMAN-JOHNSON FIGHT TO-DAY

Colored Champion Is Big Favorite

Jack Johnson the colored heavyweight champion reigns a 10 to 6 and 10 to 4 favorite in his battle with Al Kaufman on the Coast this afternoon and money is freely wagered at 2 to 1 that Johnson will win inside the limit of ten rounds.

This is as it should be. Nothing short of the biggest surprise that ever happened in the prize ring will be the result if Kaufman should lick the black man.

Many Boston fans have seen both men perform. Kaufman fought at Chelsea and beat Fred Bradley who had little rating. The class he showed then was far from being anywhere near the championship number, but he may have improved in the last five years, which is to be expected.

He has been on to and outer, and took him nearly forty rounds to beat Jim Barry, a third rater not so very long ago, yet he is unbilious and wants to get at the top of the class.

Billy Delaney who was offering odds for Kaufman in the East not so many months ago thinks now since he has relinquished the charge that Kaufman is making a big mistake tackling Johnson. The changing of opinion by the veteran manager is not easily understood.

In spite of the short distance the bout goes there is widespread interest all over the country, as the mill will furnish a good chance to get a line on Johnson's form, as if will be the first time he has been up against a man of his weight who has some promise in him.

Kaufman has all the best of it if the bout goes the limit of ten rounds, as it is a no-decision affair and will be so recorded if both men are on their feet at the expiration of the thirty minutes of fighting.

Reports from the coast say that he is in splendid trim, and though the distance makes it almost an impossibility for him to win, he may be that lucky to catch Mr. Johnson far from his most particular best.

How the Men Compare

KAUFMAN.		JOHNSON
18	Neck	17½
42	Chest	40½
44½	Expansion	41½
16	Biceps	18½
31	Waist	34½
23	Thigh	25½
15¼	Calf	15½
75	Reach	72
6 ft. 2 in.	Height	6 ft. 1¼ in.
202	Weight	213

Johnson has been keeping the exact state of his form away from the newspaper men. When they visited him Abbha was clearly working under wraps.

Just why Johnson should try to fool anyone isn't quite clear. He is in fair letter condition to gallop all over Kaufman, and poor old Billy Delaney knew he will.

Kaufman, it would appear, has just one chance—his cyclonic attack against Johnson's. Kaufman hits with deadly effect. He is one of the great fighthanders in the game, and is plainly slow about clinching it up against his rival's jaw.

A little may be scored along this afternoon, and all the scheming of Willus Britt and the Assanola will fade away on the empty air. Kaufman is certainly big enough, and is that mythical thing he is one of the classes in a hundred or lick over the throne, where sits Lil Abbha Johnson in all his showy glory.

Kaufman was so confident that he could finish Kaufman in a few rounds that he actually consented to a no-decision contest, and if it is up in the colored man to show class by getting Kaufman at short notice.

The referee may give his opinion of the fight after the affair for publication, but will not make any announcement at the ringside to the spectators. In this way wagers will be settled.

ROWDYISM IN BASEBALL NEEDS A SUDDEN CHECK

Unless the baseball powers clamp they brakes down hard the national pastime is likely to see a return of rowdyism that disgraced the sport in the old days. Within the past week enough of the old malady has shown to warrant strenuous measures. Among other more or less startling breaches of etiquette here are a few regrettable occurrences that have shocked the senses of the tender fan: Ty Cobb incarcened with arrest on charge of felonious assault with intent to kill; Fred Clarke arrested on assault and battery charge; Johnny Evers suspended for abuse of umpire; Frank Chance, Harry Steinfeldt and Joe Tinker chased off field for ungentlemanly conduct, later fined.

It will be noticed that the trouble seems confined to three clubs which fig ure most strongly for the prospective championship honors of the world. The unrestrained end of world's championships seems to have dimmed the sportsmanlike senses of those clubs which have a good chance. It will surely result in new strictures being intensified and interchange of good-season games among all clubs of the majors.

The Detroit club came to the rescue of Cobb and staved off a serious warrant by settling, over long distance, with the proprietor of the Euclid Hotel, Cleveland. Cobb is alleged to have assaulted a night watchman of the hostelry Friday night. The Cowboy claims the assailed one got fresh with him and tried to beat him up with a "billy." The bad blood between Cleveland and Detroit was no doubt much to blame for this outbreak.

Scarcely less delicate are the relations between Pittsburg and Chicago in the rival league. The Cubs have just succeeded in taking three out of four from the Pirates on the latter's home ground. The only defeat was chalked up after the entire champion lidded had been chased by the umpires. Now Secretary Williams, of Chicago, prefers charges against Umpire Billy Klem, the Adonis who turned a deaf ear to the jeers at the Polo Grounds last Fall. Williams says Klem was one of the offending Cubs, claiming he would "get" them, etc. Bad actions, if true; but equally bad for Williams if false. The teams played yesterday under special written warning from President John A. Heydler, who whisks west to Pittsburg for the series to see things first handed.

PADDY SULLIVAN NEARLY GETS SIEGER

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—"Paddy" Sullivan of Brooklyn defeated Charlie Sieger, the "Iron Man" of Hoboken, N. J., in a ten-round contest at the Sharkey Athletic Club. In the fifth round Sieger missed a right to jaw and Sullivan landed, and the "Iron Man" went to the floor for an instant. The boys clinched too often to the latter part of the bout and the referee had to grip them apart. Both were bleeding and Sieger had a cut on his head from Sullivan's constant jabbing.

MEDALS FOR 1915 SWIM WINNERS

Prizes for the two 1915 swimming meets, which were held on August 7, will be awarded next Saturday morning at 10:30. The winners who competed at the meet on North End Beach will receive their medals at North End Park, and those who were in the events at East Boston will go to Wood Island Park. The prizes will be awarded at North End Park by Jess H. Leary and at the Wood Island bathhouse by John J. O'Donnell, Jr. As previously announced by the Boston Park Playground Association, prizes will be awarded to the winners of first and second places in the events, gold medals to the winners of first place and silver medals to the second.

BOXING BITS OF NEWS

Dick Nelson wants to tackle anything in the 45 to 48 weight class for the lightweight limit, and his manager, Charley Limberg, is untiring in his efforts to get his boy a match. Limberg says something good, now that Dick has gone through most of the middleweights and Jack Britton, Ted Kid Lewis and Nelson would make a dandy bout for any of them.

Who better, or rather the sruuhl of data, that Nelson Times is showing, consisting of the alleged slipping of Stanley Burke, will take four men to fill it down to the bottom. John Beall, Dr. Cook returning from the North Pole when he landed with Peary.

The check on this corner, Dr. Peary in this, Both members of this club. The boys will protect themselves at all times.

Jack Johnson now bears bandages on the road reducing. He is down to 212 pounds from 226, but is still fat. Maybe after the Barry fight this will be at Los Angeles, he will be about right.

The Johnson-Kaufman match will furnish the fans a line on the champion but little more.

Phil McGovern and Joe Wagner are down to weight for their ten-round session at the Bedford Club, Philadelphia, next Monday night, and from now on will rest up a bit.

Frank Klaus and Hugo Kelly are to meet in a twenty-round battle at New Orleans on September 30. Mike Paulo has signed to meet Joe Jeanette.

Billy (Bull) Roche, former manager of George McFadden and Willie Lewis, has arrived in New York from Europe with his Kelly-Roche picture and expects to start around about the week, touring the Eastern cities. Referring to reports of the Cross-Hyland fight, says Cross should have won in two rounds, but got a cramp in his leg from the cold weather and lost the match.

Ryan is boosting Monte Attell and Lew Powell. Billy will bring the latter to Boston next week to get a bout on with Cross. Monte, according to Ryan, has had no chance at all. He has been 18 months under the guidance of Jimmy Kelly, but has been unable to get from Jockey Kennedy, Eddie Johnny Kelly, Joe Coster, Abe Attell, Neil Rooney, and Percy Coye. Bosh. Roche will bring Foley and Attell here for the winner of the Wagner-McGovern fight if some club will show him real money.

Miss Eleanor Emmons Made Bride To-day

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

The beautiful country estate of Nathaniel Emmons at Falmouth was the setting part for smart society to-day for the wedding of Miss Eleanor Emmons to Dr. Channing Simmons of Beacon street. Miss Emmons, who is a member of the Vincent and New Riding Clubs, is one of the most charming and democratic girls of her set. Her engagement was announced last winter on the eve of her departure with her father for a tour through Europe. The marriage to-day was on an if fresco affair, witnessed by only the immediate families. It was followed by a large and brilliant reception.

Dr. Simmons, who is a Harvard '09 man, is the son of Mrs. Desire Desprideile by an early marriage, and is a member of the University, Union Boat and other clubs.

A special car from Boston took down the family party, which included Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wales Simmons, 2d, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin McDowell Garfield Grosvenor, Mr. and Mrs. John Parkinson (Polly Emmons), Professor and Mrs. Desprideile and Mr. and Mrs. N. F. Emmons (Elizabeth Lawrence).

Boston society is interested in the wedding, at Pelham Manor, N. Y., of Luther Gatlin Billings, Jr., son of Rear Admiral Luther Billings, U. S. N., to Miss Catherine Clemson North, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Donath of that place. The ceremony was performed at Lakeside by the Rev. David DeForest Surrell of South Orange, N. J., assisted by the Rev. David Brewer Eddy of Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Paine entertained a dinner party yesterday at Tanglewood, their Summer home in Lenox. Mr. and Mrs. Dixey and Miss Rosamond Dixey are to have a house party at Tanglewood for the hunt ball and races which begin Saturday. Among their guests who are arriving to-day are Miss Dorothy Jordan of Boston, Miss Edith Bird, Kenneth Budd, Albert Hoffman of New York, and Theron Catlin of St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hurlubis, Jr., who have been travelling abroad, are returning to Boston to-day.

The violin and hotel sets of Stockbridge were present yesterday afternoon at the annual meeting of the Laurel Hill Association. This is the oldest village improvement society in the country and has for its president Alexander Sedgwick. Among the guests were Governor Draper, Lieutenant Governor Frothingham, and the members of the Governor's council. Mrs. chief speaker was President Harry A. Garfield of Williams College.

Frank L. Dean has returned from a long trip to Europe with Mrs. Dean and their son, Lincoln. They have been visiting Berlin, Frankfort, Weimar, Bad Nauheim, Brussels, Amsterdam and Cologne.

Miss Heloise Meyer, Miss Helen Alexander, Miss Vera Bloodgood, Master D. Sohier Hayden Channing, Morris Kellogg, Gordon Maynard and Chester G. Hardon were at the meeting of the Berkshire hounds yesterday at Overlee, the country residence of Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Frothingham. Mr. and Mrs. Frothingham were hosts at a breakfast given for the riders.

Among those who took part in the French entertainment given for the benefit last evening were Miss Gertrude Parsons, Miss Kathryn Lawrence and Miss Cornelia Barnes.

Miss Eleanora R. Sears of Boston is the guest of Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont at Marble House in Newport. Mrs. Belmont closes her Newport house to-morrow and goes to New York to assist in the direction of the suffragist movement.

Members of the South Shore Summer colony are grooming their horses for the Cohasset Horse Show, which opens at Henry M. Whitney's farm in Cohasset to-morrow. The show continues on Saturday.

Like the one held there two years ago, this will be in aid of the "Bonnie Bairns," which is connected with St. Stephen's Episcopal Church at Cohasset and is a society for sick babies. The Rev. Howard S. Richey, rector of St. Stephen's, is anxious to raise money enough to meet the running expenses of the new "Bonnie Bairns" home on King street, Cohasset, which is being occupied this year for the first time.

In addition to the horse show, there will be two races each day. Upon the committee in charge of the affair are George G. Crocker, Ralph Williams and William P. Mendell, proprietors of the Cohasset cottagers; Charles E. Mason and Frederick Prentice of the Hingham colony, and James B. Lord of Chicago, son-in-law of Thomas W. Lawson.

Many society women will appear in the events. Miss Martha Wolfred-Hunter, Miss "Bunny" Lawson, Mrs. James Fuller Lord, Mrs. Eben Jenney Sturgeon, Mrs. Hugh Butterfield, Mrs. DeFord Bigelow, Miss Harriett Boyden, Mrs. Matthew Luce and Miss Dorothy Mandell are among those who will drive their own horses.

Mrs. Lark Andersen has entered seventeen horses for the events.

* * *

Mrs. James Lowell Putnam of Beacon street is to entertain her cousin, Miss Lotta Bridgman at her summer place in Bar Harbor during the latter part of the month. Miss Robinson has been the guest recently of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish at Newport.

Colonel and Mrs. William D. Sohier, who have been travelling by automobile through the White Mountains, have returned to their Summer place at Burgess Point, Beverly, for the late season.

Chapter VI.—Continued.

THE Duke's smile grew to a light laugh as he took the bit of paper, rolled it in his hands, and tossed it carelessly on the floor. A moment later Guerchard seemed to change his mind about the paper, for he leaned over and picked it up. As he did so something else caught his attention, and he went down on all fours, peering eagerly beneath the big arm chair, which bordered the fireplace, like the rest of the room. There was a grin of satisfaction on his face as he arose.

One of the detectives, who had been out in the garden, came in with a bit of cloth in his hands.

"Monsieur Guerchard, we found this in the garden," he said. "It is a piece of a dress worn by Victoire, the missing caretaker. We found it near the well."

The Magistrate was all importance again, having been temporarily excelled by the activity of Guerchard.

"Ha, this may offer a solution of the mystery," he cried, reaching out for the bit of cloth, but Guerchard took it first, with a smiling bow. As the detective looked at it carefully Monsieur Gournay-Martin bustled forward.

"This means that the faithful Victoire has been murdered," he cried. "It is terrible. We must search the well."

"Well now, Monsieur, have you a dog or a cat in the house?" Guerchard asked, in his most polite manner.

"No, but, Monsieur," the urbane detective smilingly replied.

"There is a cat, a pet of Victoire's," Gournay-Martin replied.

"This was dragged into the yard by the cat," Guerchard said.

"Absurd," blustered the Magistrate. "How can you explain a bloody ring?"

"Simply! There are the marks of the cat's claws. Look at them yourself," and Guerchard handed the cloth to the Magistrate.

They Find Victoire.

The examining Magistrate's wrath at the cool impudence of Guerchard approximated apoplexy. He fumed and sputtered, while the detective smiled at him mockingly.

"If Victoire has not been murdered, how do you account for her disappearance?" he demanded.

"Victoire has not disappeared," Guerchard asserted firmly, with the same unsuppressing amble.

"Not disappeared! Cease jesting, Guerchard. How do you know she has not disappeared?"

"I have seen her."

"You have seen her! Impossible! When? Where?"

"Here; just now."

Involuntarily the Magistrate and all the others, save the Duke, whose self possession was complete, looked about them wonderingly and looked at one another.

"Where is she?" the Magistrate asked, his voice raised in fury.

Guerchard went over to the big arm chair in front of the fireplace, stilled it about so that it faced the room and raised a rug which had been spread over it. Germaine shrieked and hid her face in her hands.

Before them in the chair was Victoire, bound and gagged, all but lifeless. Her head was pallid; her eyes were closed; her hand drooped. But for the bonds that held her firmly she would have collapsed. As a sign from Guerchard two of his men undid the bonds.

"Take her into the next room and revive her," he said to Folleret, the Magistrate ordered.

The speechless, half-conscious woman was raised to the arms of the two detectives and carried out of the drawing room, Guerchard laughed delightedly at the surprise he had sprung.

"How did you know she was there?" the Magistrate exploded.

"Oh, one can learn a great deal merely by examining closely," the detective explained lightly. "Beneath that chair, which I was grouping with Fontes a while ago, I saw a pair of heels. From the heels it was easy to deduce a woman. Besides, standing a little to the right of the two the other room, where Victoire was recovering her strength. The Mysterme and Germaine and her father followed him. The Duke, who had been a silent observer of all that had taken place, remained alone.

Chapter VII.

CHARMERAUX was talking of Sonia one of the detective's girl whom he knew now to be a thief, whom he had saved from exposure, disgrace—perhaps from prison. He remained in the drawing room alone because he wanted to puzzle it all out, and he thought she might come there to him.

Sonia had been waiting for the chance to speak to the Duke alone. She came in cautiously, a few minutes after the others had departed, and with clasped hands and eyes that begged for pity faced him.

"I could not go away without telling you all," she sobbed.

He caressed her chestnut waved, point ing to the door through which the others had gone. "Guerchard is there. He is watching."

Sonia sank down on the sofa and, with eyes cast down and hands held limp in her lap, talked eagerly, rapidly, as if her tongue would never tire of the punishment which she was inflicting upon herself.

Germaine the Thief.

"I've saved me," she said. "You know that I am a thief, but I made the pendant, yet you saved me. Well, I took the pendant because Germaine had every thing and I had nothing, and out of all I had I wanted that one piece. It was she who was the thief. She had stolen you from me, and I wanted to hurt her. I knew the moment you gave her the pendant and I realized that she should not possess it. Mr. Post, poor fellow, the Duke said I was good."

"I despise me, I know she wished it," I pity you," he said.

"Oh, I know, you think that is all that this is my thief thief," she said despairingly. "I am not. I have stolen for ten times, twenty, fifty, perhaps I don't know how much. I was penniless and penniless when I came here from Russia. The night when I first found you I had pawned me number to was horrible, and I would not—I would not—I have been stealing ever since to keep myself free."

Disturbed, but somewhat shielded, myself, the Duke was on the alert and looked Sonia for silent.

"I know if I intrude," the detective said, as he walked over to the couch where Magistrate had left his hat and cane and took up a paper. He smiled cynically at the Duke and Sonia as he left the room.

Now I am going away. Sonia resumed when they were once more alone. "I shall never see you again, but I—"

He rose, poor Sonia," the Duke said, and put his hand on her shoulder. She laid her own beside her and reached out with the hand with a gesture of compassion. Sonia, never before had any one been kind to her own, had ever kissed it.

"I love you," she said.

She dropped his hand, arose and stood looking down at him. Her face was pale, and it confronted her.

"Monsieur," she said, "I am sorry that the order has been changed. No one is permitted to go near the house for ten minutes. To your room, Archambault! You needn't have come here."

Lupin's Telegram.

With an imploring look at the Duke Sonia withdrew to her own apartment. Charmeraux turned upon Guerchard as if he would annihilate him. Gournay Martin looked at his watch, and, indeed, resumed his interest in the police investigation of the robbery.

He and Guerchard were talking about the telephone when Folleret, the man who had been with Gournay Martin, suddenly appeared in the doorway of the room. In his hands Bulteau a telegram.

"It is addressed to Monsieur Lupin," he said. "I've read this."

Charmeraux took the telegram, glanced at it, and then, with a look of disgust, he took it from his hands and read it aloud:

"Have left Paris. Will be back in time to keep my word with regard to the Rain of Rubies. Will call on you at 10 o'clock in the morn, however, to-night between a quarter to twelve and midnight. Arsene Lupin."

Good Humor Helps to Make Girls Pretty

By WINIFRED BLACK.

THE Telephone Company of San Francisco has issued a statement declaring in good, plain English, that no one but pretty girls need apply for a position at the hello board.

"No homely women for us," said the assistant of the telephone company. "Homely women are always disappointed with life and very few of them are happy. They can't be discouraged girls—no matter what fate has in store for them. The manager of that company thinks he knows what he's talking about—but he doesn't.

There's every other man on earth. Any woman who is naturally pretty is pretty to me, and he's not a pug-nosed, freckle-faced girl with as pretty as a picture face is who knows enough to manhave her own way with the people she meets in the world.

When a man talks about a pretty girl, he means an agreeable girl, and if you'd put on your best smile and make up your mind to be pretty to every one you met, you'd be pretty, and there's no doubt about it. You could be just as pretty with a plain smile and sparkling eyes and rosy cheeks as you could with a frown.

Men are simply clever creatures—about everything but women.

Once I saw a little cropped-headed goose of a girl who ever laughed every time a man looked at her, no matter the most serious minded man in the world believe that she thought he was funny, and accordingly and overcome with admiration for his wonderful powers. Cheer up, girls; you don't have to be pretty to make men think you are sweet and lovely, and you don't have to be good-natured and darlin' well-behaved.

You could put the Venus de Milo down in the middle of a ballroom floor and she'd be left to herself, while the large person with the large complexion and the small pattern of her kind.

And that would be right in doing it.

It's home to right on to pedestal, and there's a real deal of a man when came to a trip to Rose Point, with a string of the thrilled and a supper afterward.

Don't worry, girls, you're every one of you pretty as long as you're rosy and happy and well and full of health and spirits and you're worth two Venuses and two Cleopatras, and even then one—every man's mother's daughter of you—even if you're sure to put your self-confidence in your value and any man whose opinion is worth having will agree with me.

CHAPTER XIII.

Roulet abide's Fears.

I was literally true that Roulet abide's ugly frightened me, and I was more terrified myself than words could express it had never seen him in such a state of mental inadequacy. He got up and down the room nervously, occasionally stopping in front of the mirror and passing his hand over his forehead as if to brush away the cobwebs. "Can it be you, Roulet abide, who have such thoughts?" he asked his own reflection. "Can it be you, Roulet abide, who have such thoughts? Come, come, you must get a grip on yourself, Roulet abide." He seemed rather to be upon the point of following the advice he was giving himself, and to be using every means to bring about a cure, for he ceased his nervous driving thought and, standing before the mirror, combed and carried for the window, and though he meant to keep only a casual look out for the slightest sign of danger, he stood there for the best part of an hour, with his head close to the window pane, listening to the noise on the distant bank of the river, the sweeping, perhaps, of a broom sputtered over the little carriage and the echo of "Oy!" and "Gee!" from the drivers who urged their horses on. The surf was quiet, the waves had grown entirely suppressed, white fur appeared suddenly shining over the black waters. It was then that for a moment the old confusion seemed to return to Roulet abide's brain, and he rose out of the water's edge and filled with the same pallor as our own, the pallor of one who has not slept. Roulet abide's face relaxed in a smile, for I felt that I was intruding upon ground where I had no right to follow, but my interview with your mother was very brief and you separated in silence. I want to ask you, my boy, whether she told you the story of the accident with the revolver on the night that Bernier told me?"

"Yes," I answered without turning his face toward me.

"You told you nothing of that kind?"

"No."

"And you did not ask her for any explanation of the pistol shot nor of the phantom of the opera? Was the echo of the death cry—the cry that was the echo of the one which we heard two years ago—from her lips in the inexplicable gallery?"

"Roulet abide, are you certain you are more curious than I asked her not?"

"And you swore to say nothing and to keep everything without her knowledge to you about the pistol shot and the cry?"

"Roulet abide, it was impossible for me to believe—for my part, I respected the secrets of Miss Lady In Black. I had not to go to ask of her when she said to me, 'We must leave each other now, my child, but nothing can ever separate us again.'"

"Ah, she said that to you—Nothing can ever separate us again?"

"Yes, my friend—and there was blood upon her hands."

We looked at each other in silence. I turned to the window and peered at the reporter. Suddenly his hand touched mine. Then he pointed to the little room which was burning at the entrance to the subterranean door which led to old Bob's study in the Tower of the Bold.

"It is dawn," said Roulet abide. "And old Bob is still at work. This old fellow is certainly industrious and we will have a peep at him at his labors."

"Will Darrac never return?" he murmured, and at this enough he were speaking to himself than to me.

A few moments later we had crossed the court and had descended into the octagon room of the Tower of Charles the Bold. It was empty. The lamp was burning on the work table, but there was no sign of old Bob.

"Why!" cried Roulet abide. He picked up the lamp and carried it from place to place, raising his voice and calling out, but tried to turn the lock of every little window which looked out on the walls of the basement. Nothing had changed in place and all were arranged in order and neatness in the chamber. While we were looking around at the bones and shells and horns and the heads of wild beasts, the hanging eyeballs, the rugs made out of bone, the leopard skins from Nevis, and the other treasures of the savant, we came to the little door behind which we found the coal, we shall in the history of humanity," and the sweeping, perhaps, of a broom sputtered with the red paint of the wash drawing which Bob had set to try upon that part of his desk which faced the window. It was exposed to the sun. It went from one window to the other and shook the iron bars in order to assure himself that they had not been touched nor tampered with in any way. Roulet abide saw what I was doing and said:

"And are you about? Before thinking about how he could have gotten out of the windows, wouldn't it be better to find out whether he were in the room?"

He set the lamp upon the parquet and began a series of footprints and Roulet abide said:

"Do not knock at the door of the Square Tower and ask Bernier whether old Bob has come to him. Watch at the postern and Pere Jacques at the iron gate. Go, subscribe, quick!"

Five minutes after I went out I was back with the information. No one had seen Old Bob in any part of the fortress. He had not passed by anywhere. Roulet abide had his face close to the portals. He said:

"I've left this lamp burning in order to make people believe that he was at work. Old Bob has added nothing to the lamp, which he had been sealed.

"Let us look at the red paint! Look at the red paint!"

He passed over the drawing, mistakenly perplexed by the strange evolution of his mind. But I could only see a little drawing of a horse.

"The red paint! the red paint!" he kept crying, as he went from one to the other. "I've seen it before and recognized it after a meeting. And he turned toward me so that I might see the admirable coffin in which he had been sealed.

"Look at the red paint! Look at the red paint!" I heard over the drawing, mistakenly perplexed by the strange evolution of his mind. But I could only see a little drawing of a horse.

"The red paint! the red paint!" he kept crying, as he went from one to the other. "I've seen it before and recognized it after a meeting."

GOOD SALES OF REALTY IN THE SUBURBS

Some particularly good sales in Roxbury and the other suburbs were reported in the realty field today, while trading in the city proper was dull.

Luther Lovell has sold to George R. Richards the new and one-half story frame dwelling house and 8S2 square feet of land at No. 8 Faith street, near Newland street, South End. This property is assessed on a total valuation of $1,600, of which $1,000 is on the land.

William R. Chaffee has sold to W. Stanley Tripp two valuable lots on Ivy street, near St. Mary's street, Back Bay. The land is priced on $15 a square foot and the price paid was slightly more than the assessed valuation which is placed $9,200.

In Roxbury the Home Savings Bank has sold to John Bridges a two and three-story brick business and 3,053 square feet of land at Nos. 18-20 Georgia street, with Blue Hill avenue, Grove Hall, all assessed for $16,200, of which $7,200 is on the land.

Alice Sandberg has purchased from Ashmead Whitehall Inc., one lot of land containing 6,204 square feet on land at No. 28 Bowdoin street, corner of Nos. 3 Crawford and Rodney. The property is rated on a total value of $12,000, of which $2,500 is on the land.

In the same suburb the three-story brick house and 2,287 square feet of land at No. 45 Holyoke street, near Harold street, assessed on a total of $5,300, have been sold by Mary E. Hall to Lottie Jacobs, title passing through Robert F. Sanderson. The land is rated for $500.

Still another sale in Roxbury is that of the estate at No. 57 Seaver street, corner of Ruggles, consisting of a three-story frame house and 7,100 square feet of land, which has been sold by Dan Shanahan from Annie Lynch. The property is assessed on a total valuation of $2,800, $1,500 being on the land.

In Dorchester Albert Tribelhan has sold to Phillip Fiandaca a lot of land containing 5,000 of land, assessed for $3,800 at No. 11 and 13 Forster street, between Bellflower and Adams streets. The land is rated for $1,000.

Merlin W. Haskell et al. have sold to Ella A. Nourse the frame dwelling house and 5,000 square feet of land at No. 10 Hancock street, Neponset, with Hancock street. West Roxbury. The estate is assessed on a valuation of $2,400 on the land.

Warren F. Freeman of the Kimball building reports the sale of four new two-family houses on the Rado estate for Robert Faulkner to Oliver Fairview street, Mattapan. The land, which is a lot No. 13 to Mrs. Katie Gardner, lot No. 12 to George W. Brown and lot No. 11 to Mrs. Annie L. South street and Radio terrace to Thomas J. Kelly, all of Rockland. It is understood that the purchasers to build at once for occupancy. They were sold in the transaction by Edward R. Fenno & Son, of Rockdale.

Deeds were filed for record at the Registry of Deeds of Norfolk county, Dedham, conveying to Ella A. Nourse, the trustee of the Griggs Land Trust of Boston, tracts the remainder of the land of the late Mrs. Griggs formed twenty years ago to develop and market lots. The term of the trust expired on Sept. 1, and under the trustees have partitioned the balance of the real estate. The deeds transfer to Mrs. Nourse one hundred thousand square feet of land in the vicinity of Cleveland circle in Brush Hill road, Milton, parcels with five houses. Plans of the partition have been filed at the Norfolk registry of deeds. The Real Estate Exchange and the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange and the Massachusetts Real Estate Board. Mrs. Nourse is also the trustee of the Griggs Land Trust in Brookline, which has been developed and sold out. Mrs. Griggs was the wife of Dr. Samuel Cabot Griggs, who died in 1900. Mrs. Griggs died in March, 1907. Besides the trustees named in the will, Sarah L. Tove, William G. Rose, Edward C. Cabot and F. B. Allen, are the trustees of the Griggs land.

The Chapin Farm Agency has sold for the estate of George W. Wells, his poultry and vegetable farm, consisting of the real estate situated on Wells avenue, near the new Lasell seminary, Auburndale. Wells, the well-known poultry and vegetable raiser, Maine, rose rapidly until he became the head of one of the largest poultry farms in New England. He died last year and his widow, Mrs. Ella M. Wells, who was sold to Samuel W. Bolster of Reading, who has already taken possession.

JORDAN MARSH DAY IS MERRY

The annual field day and family outing of the Jordan Marsh Company employees will be held at Nantasket Beach on Wednesday next, and the entire proceeds will be devoted to the benefit of the Mutual Aid Association. It is expected that this event will be the most successful affair of the kind Jordan Marsh employees have ever held and those in charge of the affair have strained every nerve to make it the "big" post-mid best. A special train will leave Rowe's Wharf at 1:30 p. m., and half an hour later special sports will begin. There will be a baseball game, running races for men, boys and girls; dancing and fireworks. A ticket will be issued to employees for the special or later trains. One of the features of the day will be "Walk a Mile." It is expected to make a big hit with the younger employees.

FOUR MORE DAYS AT WHITE CITY

On Tuesday and Wednesday the SUNDAY AMERICAN Outing Club visited White City, Worcester, with the last of the SUNDAY AMERICAN free tickets. The great Worcester County pleasure resort will remain open four afternoons and one Sunday night. Many of White City's attractions are not excelled even in the metropolitan cities of the country.

Parker, Fiat	6:22:21 4-5
Burman, Buick	6:25:41

By J. C. KERRISON.

LOWELL, Sept. 9.—Long Island may have her Vanderbilt, Chicago her Crown Point, Savannah her Grand Prix and Ormond her record work, but for keen, close, exciting, thrilling and dare-devil driving, in which men take their very lives in their hands, one can excel the national stock car championship held on the Merrimac course.

It was a veritable exhibition of daring, a vindication of the fact that once started in a race the drivers will take chances which otherwise would look as if they were courting death. They tore down the stretch, around the sharp and blind turns with a reckless abandon that seems destined to abet them to a cot in the hospital. It was perhaps this same recklessness that gave to them a clean bill of health, for while no less than eight cars were put out of commission in the contest not a spectator was injured. The contest was replete with accidents, which even before started before the race itself. Strange to say, delayed from reaching the starting line by striking a telegraph pole.

For brilliant and exciting competition the contest was a wonder, having no less than three, if not four, pairs in each of the fifties, and only one of those remaining in prominent positions at the close of the contest.

Wonderful Victory.

It was a wonderful race and a wonderful victory for Robertson. Thrice had he been leaded by others; even by Gene Lytle in the Apperson, who looked liked a logical winner until he met with disaster, then by Harry Grant in the Alco, who started on his third last lap with four minutes to the good only to meet with mishap in the way of a broken chain, and then by Burman, who held the lead for a short time.

Robertson had to drive right to the open of the second lap to clinch his victory. De Palma seemed to be an easy winner of second position, when his engine was moved to act badly, and with almost ten miles to spare over his nearest rival, he stopped at the pit. He started again, but the motor showed poor form, and he was last to sight, his car "laying down" on the last stretch.

Poole in the Isotta, who had been plugging along methodically, finished second with Parker third, Burman fourth and Basle fifth. The last two, at one time looked as though they were completely out of the race, as for many miles they were lying behind.

The five 150,000 who lined the course and packed the great grandstand there was not a dull moment in the entire six hours of the clean, fierce and hard-fought contests. From the crack of the gun to the waving of the white flag at the close there was something in the contest worth while to keep one busy, and after all was over it left something which they can talk about for years to come.

In the very first lap Chevrolet in the Buick, encouraged by his win on Monday, cut loose like a veritable wild man, taking the lead in the time of ten minutes and one seconds. Dranch in the American was his second position, but not for long, Chevrolet kept the leadership for two laps, and then on the third lap forced to a wild draw, as he had cracked the frame of his car, and to continue would mean possible disaster either to himself or others.

Robertson then took the lead, followed closely by Parker, Grant and Burman trailing the latter, Grant, De Palma, Parker and Lytle closely bunched. On this lap Dranch strained his steering knuckle and he lost some time replacing the same. Later he re-entered the contest, and by strong, consistent work was running at the close of the contest, making no great attempt to overhaul the leaders, but time, however, was creditable, to say the least.

Drivers Have Hard Luck.

Downey, in the Knox, likewise commenced to suffer misfortunes, which seemed to follow him all through the race. His teammate, Shaw, seemed no better off, having troubles of his own. The third member of the Knox team, Belcher, tried hard to knock down a telegraph pole, but was a futile attempt, however, and he resumed the contest. Then on the third lap, that were running at the end of the race were to be hundreds of novices, so far as road races are concerned. It must be stated that they have no reason to be ashamed of themselves, and so far as the finish were concerned, they certainly acquitted themselves with honor.

Robertson, Lytle, Burman and Grant were in the fifties at the end of the first three miles, while a second division was headed by Parker, Belcher, Shaw in the Stoddard, De Palma and Hughes in the Alco and Joe Robertson in the Simplex used ahead. Burman through various causes lost his position, Belcher and Shaw and Belcher each going up one, with Cobe in the right holding them, Shaw, who had been started six hour later than his fellow competitors, made some few feet laps way in the rear.

The same order continued for two laps more, then in a lightning sprint with Robertson, Hech Lytle dashed to the fore, leading the field by the seconds over Robertson, who was sixty-three seconds ahead of Grant. Then on the fourth lap Lytle commenced to experience difficulties, and Robertson went ahead, with Grant in second position, Lytle in third, Parker in fourth, De Palma in fifth.

Lytle tried hard to regain his lost position, but it was of no avail, for while at the Country Club turn he broke the steering shaft and joined the ranks. The fight for first honors was now between Robertson and Grant, and the latter fighting along as hard as they could, but Robertson, once again to the front on the fifth lap, Monday, was never headed, and held at 127 miles. He was five minutes and forty-seven in the lead on the eighth lap. De Palma and Burman chased along in that order. At the conclusion of the ninth lead of seven minutes over Grant, who led De Palma four minutes, with Parker, Poole twelve minutes, Burman, Belcher, Basle and Shaw were the remainder of the rear squadron. It was announced there that Cobe was suffering from a broken nut on one of his cylinders and would travel just to make a showing without trying for speed.

Robertson drove like the seasoned veteran that he is, keeping the lead to the 286th mile, when Grant, by brilliant and consistent driving headed to the fore, taking the lead by seven minutes to spare, however, was cheated his hold his honors for but a short time as on the backstretch of this same lap his car broke, caught around his tires and brought him to a standstill. Poole and Parker had been snatched from out his very hand, so he coolly sighted a chevrier and said: "There goes the silver cup and the $1,000 in prize money."

Robertson then resumed the position of honors from which he had thrice been dethroned. There was however to be no further change in the leaders, as Stoddard colored Simplex traveled the three remaining laps without apparent competition.

Loses With Goal Near.

As Robertson finished his race De Palma was standing in his pit waiting to see how he then having but one more lap to go, while his nearest competitor had two. When he got under way again the thief moved sluggishly, like an overworked horse, and while it was felt that he would be a long time in finishing the lap he was certainly looked upon as the winner of second place. Dame Fortune is fickle, however, and De Palma never reached the finish, getting lost on the backstretch. Al Poole, who had been driving along methodically, came in for the place, his condition strained further endeavors and the third second with the 21st driver, Parker, cleaned up the two laps finishing third, with Burman in the fifth and Basle fifth.

As soon as Basle finished the referee called a halt to the contest. The contestants were: Downey, driving Dorbert the Knox, who had covered 286 miles in 6 hours 35 minutes and 50 seconds; Shaw in the Knox, who had gone 275 miles in 6 hours 2 minutes and 12 seconds; Cobe, in the Lozier, who had covered 275.5 miles in 6 hours 32 minutes and 6 seconds, and Hughes, in the Alco, who had made 275 miles in 6 hours 47 minutes and 12 seconds. Hughes, in the Alco, left on the twenty-ninth lap on account of a broken chain. Belcher, in the Knox, did not like the S turn at the Country Club, and got a puncture. De Palma was out on the backstretch on the last lap. Shaw, in the Stoddard-Dayton, was forced to retire in the tenth because of a supposed fracture of the rear axle.

Lytle, who by the way, made the fastest lap of the race—10 minutes and 19 seconds on the ninth lap—relied on the next succeeding round, owing to a broken cam shaft. It would be hard to pick up the most brilliant driving of the day. All the men did wonderfully good work, and gave to Lowell the best that has ever been seen.

The five leaders in this race were all equipped with Michelin tires, and thereby continued the excellent work that has ever characterized the use of these particular tires in the great races of the world. Unusual Michelins won not only in this particular contest but in the long distance race that straightaway on the succeeding races of Tuesday. Michelin scored a great success throughout the week.

GRAIN MEN IN BIG MEETING

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—The biggest gathering of board of trade and grain exchange men that the country ever has seen will assemble in Chicago Friday and Saturday of next week. In response to an invitation of the Chicago Board of Trade grain and provision men from all parts of this country and Canada are coming for the meeting.

Over 500 to 1,000 prominent business men are expected. The gathering will be for a general interchange of ideas. Friday will be given over to business and Saturday to entertainment. Chicago Board of Trade men have raised an entertainment fund of $25,000 for the two days. Two of the important questions to be discussed in open meeting are: Inspection of grain and the question of margins.

PRAISE WONDERLAND "CINDERELLA" SHOW

Only four more days remain in which to enjoy the Wonderland fun for this season. The "Cinderella" production on the open-air stage has reached a state of perfection and is highly entertaining.

The Wonderland management has made elaborate plans for the coming year. Each week there will be a big public event, and the wishes of the public will be met next season in a manner to startle the amusement world. The SUNDAY AMERICAN Outing Club turned out yesterday and Tuesday in unusual numbers and filled the park, using the last SUNDAY AMERICAN free ticket. The park will remain open for business right up to 11 p. m. Sunday night.

BLACKWELL'S BODY TO BE CREMATED

The body of Henry B. Blackwell will be cremated at the Walk Hill Crematory at Forest Hills Sunday at 2 o'clock.

The body will be taken to the crematory in a plain pine box, draped with a black cloth. The services will be conducted by Professor Borden P. Bowne of Boston University. There will be congregational singing, with Mrs. F. J. Garrison as organist. Professor Bowne will read a selection from Whittier.

Among the pall bearers will be Louis Brandeis, counsel for Henry L. Bixler, who got a judgment for $12 against the actress. An execution was issued and Deputy Sheriff Cutler returned it unsatisfied.

DAYS OF RECREATION AT LEXINGTON PARK

Lexington Park, the beautiful woodland retreat in Lexington will be open to the public up to Saturday night, when it will close for the season. The rest of the SUNDAY AMERICAN free tickets will be used tomorrow afternoon and evening. If used in the afternoon the big theatre is free and Sunday American Outing Club. The last days of Lexington Park this year are being crowded full of fun and recreation.

AGED LYNN MAN BURNED TO DEATH

PITTSFIELD, N. H., Sept. 9.—Herbert H. Hollis of Lynn Mass., seventy-eight years of age, who was visiting the home of Elmo George at Barnstead Parade, is dead as the result of burns. It is thought he upset a lighted lamp, as it was broken in pieces and the oil was scattered about the floor.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS: FINANCIAL NEWS

WALL ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

WALL STREET, New York, Sept. 9.—So exclusive and tense is the focus on Harriman that the Government crop estimate is ignored. The report will meet the expectations of students of this market page, especially the corn data. The ultimate grain yield will be bountiful, however; so much so that Western roads are not facing its transportation with easy confidence.

Cereal prices are sufficiently high to warrant the belief that farmers will hasten to market their commodity, and this accumulated harvest is inevitably to tax carriers. The upshot may be the storing of a great deal of grain in elevators, which would require more than the ordinary amount of money to "move the crop." Fortunately, Western banks are well prepared, for, notwithstanding the free shipments of funds from Chicago to the agricultural districts in the last three weeks, the deposits on hand on September 1 were higher than on June 23.

$ $ $

Atchison and Rock Island are acting well in view of the condition of the corn crop. Their operating officials say that the crop in their territory has not been injured to any great extent. Atchison has money enough to increase its dividend, but the directors have refrained from doing the good of several years ago, when definite promises were made that stock was held for jobbing purposes and never kept. This is the Year of the Square Deal, and every promise made by a director must be fulfilled to the letter.

$ $ $

The unfortunate feature of the Harriman situation is that the public has lost confidence in the statements of the directors. Under ordinary circumstances a physician's bulletin is accepted at its face value, but that cannot be said of those issued by Dr. Lyle.

$ $ $

The announcement made exclusively in this column that Harriman has positively and definitely severed his connection is further confirmed. The only question now disturbing his associates is the matter of handing the property in his absence. Mr. Harriman has appointed Judge Lovett to carry out his plans, and most of these have progressed so far that there can be no backward movement.

$ $ $

It can now be announced on the same authority that Edwin Hawley will not succeed Harriman. Hawley is a splendid man to buy and sell railroads, but as an operating officials he does not get very much reputation. He is a railroad trader, but has yet to prove that he is an able railroad manager.

This is no reflection on Mr. Hawley, who is an excellent man in the position that he has carved for himself in the financial district, but he has made his greatest successes as a dealer in railroad stocks, and the same is true of Lovett in connection with Interborough-Metropolitan. That is, they expect to make their money in the rise of the rail insiders of Interborough-Metropolitan do not make any money in the rise unless they are playing false in U. S. Rubber. A dividend on the latter's common is necessary to a successful reorganization of International Paper. Only a fool of the country will buy rubber because Lovett is in the directorate. In fact, the less confidence in the new traction deal, for the two interests are identical.

$ $ $

Wall Street heard that directors of the Union Pacific were displeased with the placing Judge Lovett in charge of the Union Pacific Railroad. The act of the directors is not generally believed to cause such action is unnecessary. Mr. Lovett is the representative of the road and Mr. Harriman's death would put him in control, even from all points of this country and Canada are coming for the meeting.

$ $ $

Over 500 to 1,000 prominent business men are expected. The gathering will be for a general interchange of ideas. Friday will be given over to business and Saturday to entertainment. Chicago Board of Trade men have raised an entertainment fund of $25,000 for the two days. Two of the important questions to be discussed in open meeting are: Inspection of grain and the question of margins.

DECLINE IN STOCK PRICES

By T. C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Absence of news regarding E. H. Harriman had a depressing influence on the stock market in Wall Street to-day. Initial transactions showed declines averaging about half a point in the standard issues. Trading was only moderately active, and traders seemed to hesitate in making commitments. Steel common was the most active issue and sold ex-dividend in spite of favorable trade reports, it declined three-quarters of a point.

The government's disappointing crop report on the conditions of corn, indicating that the probable yield will be about 2,900,000,000 bushels less than previously expected, seemed to have already been discounted, as stocks of railroads operating in the corn belt were steady.

San Francisco second preferred was heavy because of selling by interests who believed that the government's unfavorable crop report might postpone the resumption of dividends on the stock this Fall. American Ice was the leader of the specialties. On moderate sales it declined two and a quarter points. American shares were heavy in London.

On the New York curb trading was dull and prices on non-materially changed.

$80,000 CROWN AS TRIBUTE TO VIRGIN

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 9.—A crown costing more than $80,000 has been presented to the Church of San Francisco at Celaya as a tribute to the Immaculate Virgin of Mary. The crowning of the image of the Virgin will take place October 12. Elaborate services have been arranged for the occasion. The $80,000 which was paid for the crown was subscribed by members of the church in the city of Celaya and vicinity. The composition is gold and silver inlaid with precious stones.

Gould on August 25, consented six days afterward to relinquish her dower right, the real estate holdings for $108,000 because known with the filing today of a release of dower in which she has hand agreed to pay Mrs. Gould this sum.

The instrument signed by Mrs. Gould is dated August 31, and is absolute in its release of all the dower rights, and all other right, title, interest, property, claim and demand whatsoever in law and equity.

STATE STREET.

STATE STREET, Sept. 9.—There was very little to the local stock market this forenoon, and orders were scarce among the brokers. The market lacked action and was somewhat uncertain. There was some demand for arbitrage stocks, but this was the result of short covering.

Amalgamated was firm in tone, which is the result of a considerable short interest. Copper shares have not recovered from yesterday's sharp break, and, although prices were less and weak, they were not heavily offer stocks. Isle Royale brought 24¾@24¾ and Centennial 11. U. S. Smelting was weak and went off to 54⅝. Lake and North Butte showed slight price changes.

Davis Daly was the curb feature for its weakness. The price slid off from 6 to 5⅞. The disagreement among the directors came as a surprise to the street. Ohio Copper eased to 4⅝. National Exploration was both weak and strong. It fell from 67 to 63 cents and recovered to 67 again.

COURT RULES STATE OWNS GREAT FLATS

The full bench of the Supreme Court to-day sent down the decision that it will draw some time ago in the case of the East Boston Company vs. the Commonwealth of Massachusetts relative to the ownership of 440 acres of flats lying off East Boston. The court adheres to its former decision holding that the Commonwealth is entitled to the flats.

The determination of the question hinged on the meaning of the phrase "ordinary low water mark" embodied in the grant by the General Court in 1640 to Samuel Maverick, then owner of Noddle's Island and from whom the company derived its title. The company claimed the phrase meant the extreme low mark and the Commonwealth claimed it meant the average of all tides or the line low water mark and the court decided in favor of the Commonwealth.

After the decision was made some months ago, counsel for the company called the Court's attention to certain points which were argued, but apparently were not passed upon, which appeared to be the general trend of reasoning in the opinion, the company claimed would be more favorable to it than to the Commonwealth. Chief Justice Knowlton then announced the decision, and the Court has since reconsidered the case.

"MIGHTY HUNTER" ASKS FOR FISH

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—A letter was received at the office of the Fish Commission here from Theodore Roosevelt asking that a consignment of black bass be forwarded to the British officials to be placed in Lake Naivasha in East Africa. Colonel Roosevelt said that he had received many courtesies at the hands of the British officials in Africa, some of whom approached him with a request that he see the proper offices with the American Fish Commission to secure for them bass, with which it is desired to stock the lake. The distinguished hunter's request will be granted.

TURN THE HOSE ON POOR PITTSBURG

PITTSBURG, Sept. 9.—The drought throughout this State is the most severe in its history and the deficiency in the Delaware River basin amounts to 40 per cent. July 1. Less than one-third of the amount of rain has fallen since the first of July, and springs are going dry and people are compelled in many districts to haul water long distances. The ground in some places is dry to the depth of four feet or more and the leaves of trees are drying and falling prematurely.

BOSTON COLLEGE HAS RECORD ATTENDANCE

Boston College opens to-day with the largest Freshman class in the history of the college. The Rev. Joseph A. Gorman, S. J., recently appointed treasurer of the college, has taken up the duties of his office, and will assist Father Gannon in the details of the business connected with the building of the new college at University Heights, Newton. Father Gannon is rector of St. Mary's, North End, for seven years, prior to his going as treasurer to Boston College.

TEAMSTER MISSING IN QUINCY FIRE

The opinion prevails among police and firemen that a man, whose name is yet to be learned, lost his life in a fire that destroyed the barn of Mr. Lyford on Observale street, Quincy. While flames were sweeping through the barn Chief Williams was informed that a teamster, who was left asleep in the stable, had not yet been located. Despite the rush of flame, the chief and some of his men sought to reach the loft, but were driven back.

CHARGES HUSBAND STOLE DAUGHTER

FALL RIVER, Sept. 9.—Albert Fournier, a French Canadian, is arrested on a charge of carrying away their six-year-old daughter while the mother was working in a factory. He hired a horse and carriage in Pilot Village by representing, it is alleged, that he wanted to take a sick person to a hospital, and drove with the little one to New Bedford, where he purchased the stableman he would leave the conveyance.

CONFIDENCE IN PEARY AND CONFIDENCE IN COOK

The Boston American, in the forward spirit of the time and in the loyal spirit of our country, expresses hearty confidence in the achievement of Commander Peary.

It has already expressed an equal confidence in the prior achievement of Dr. Cook.

This newspaper has no patience or sympathy with that captious spirit of criticism which, in advance of formal proof, goes greedily to cast discredit upon the discovery of Dr. Cook.

The very worst offender in this particular is the garrulous old Transcript of this city that from the hour of Cook's arrival has called him a liar and a fakir. And this without knowing any of the facts. But this is not surprising in the Transcript. While preaching all the virtues, it constantly practices all the deceptions. With its nose stuck in the garbage can, it is always seeking for decayed matter to print to suit its own purposes.

Of course, until the formal proofs and records are presented and considered, no one in the civilized world, save Dr. Cook himself, can actually KNOW that he was the first man in all the world to reach the Pole. In the meantime it is neither logical, progressive nor patriotic to cast aspersion upon the achievement of a great American, whose character and repute contain nothing to justify the unworthy doubts and imputations.

Dr. Cook's long and honorable career ENTITLES him to credence. During fifteen stern, laborious years of patient suffering and heroic daring he has enjoyed the highest character for probity and sincerity. Every line of his record is in opposition to the suggestion of either pretender or charlatan. The charlatan and fakir does not persist in arduous and heroic ways. He seeks the easy line of least resistance and avoids the narrow path of danger and daring and suffering and self-denial. There are a thousand ways that a pretender would prefer to follow to fame and fortune other than the awful line that leads through Arctic snows to the frozen axis of the world.

If Dr. Cook is scoffed at for a time, and doubted and mocked by the captious and the skeptic, he may comfort himself with the reflection that his fate is the fate of great pioneers from Galileo and Columbus all the way.

He is built of the stuff of pioneers and martyrs, and we hope that his title to imperishable fame will be completely established.

It is no REAL disparagement of Dr. Cook that the first dispatches from Commander Peary were received with universal credence and applause.

Peary is, first of all, an engineer by profession.

He is also a naval officer and carries the splendid spirit and the magnificent prestige of the American navy.

He has spent twenty-three dauntless and enduring years in Arctic exploration, and this is his SEVENTH attempt to reach the Pole. Every effort has carried him farther north and nearer to the way and the truth.

Nothing could be more sensational than Peary's amazing challenge of the veracity of Cook.

It may, indeed, turn out that Peary's charges are true and that Dr. Cook is the Munchausen of the age, the chief of all impostors and confidence men.

But no one with a grain of wholesome jealousy for the honor of human nature can want it to turn out so.

And Peary's haste to discredit his rival seems overeager.

If there are Eskimos who say that Cook's story is false it would have been more becoming in Peary if he had left to another the task of being their reporter.

That he should put his own name behind the charge and shout it down the meridians to the ends of the earth suggests an untempered zeal.

The dignity and valor of Peary's unquestioned exploit are such that much will be forgiven him. But we could wish, for the sake of the faith of men in men, that he were less anxious to discredit his rival.

The American people generally, with all their pride in and admiration for Peary, will insist that Dr. Cook should have a fair and deliberate hearing.

Mr. Rockefeller, Dr. Parkhurst and Taxation

Mr. Rockefeller Doesn't Quite Understand What Taxation Means

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal Examiner

In the last column of this page our distinguished contributor, Dr. Parkhurst, talks in plain and convincing fashion to Mr. Rockefeller and others about taxation. All of our readers will study Dr. Parkhurst's views with interest.

It is a good thing for Dr. Parkhurst to remind Mr. Rockefeller, as he does, that Rockefeller belongs to the people, and not the people to Rockefeller.

We present with great satisfaction to our great reading family Dr. Parkhurst's good, strong, radical views—rather strange in these days of special privilege and "the public be damned."

We add a few lines.

When Mr. Rockefeller says that he objects to an income tax because he has "acquired his money honestly, and the people have no right to share in the earnings resulting from his accumulations," he speaks sincerely.

Mr. Rockefeller thinks that HE has actually created and actually owns the thousand million dollers now under his control. He probably believes that the cunning which enabled him to get control of the national supply of oil, to corrupt railroad owners and swindle business men by getting rates below their rates, is really the exercise of a noble faculty.

Even if Mr. Rockefeller's idea of himself were accurate, there would be nothing in his argument against an income tax. He says that when he has made a thousand million dollars honestly the government has no right to take part of that money.

Why hasn't the government that right? Are the rights of Mr. Rockefeller different from the rights of other individuals, big and little?

When a man gets a dollar and a half by working in a ditch for ten hours, nobody questions that that money is honestly his. Does the government hesitate to tax the ditch digger's dollar and a half? No.

If he drinks a glass of beer for five cents the government takes one cent to help build warships and pay federal judges, OF WHOM NOT A FEW WORK FOR ROCKEFELLER INSTEAD OF WORKING FOR THE PEOPLE.

When a woman brings a child into the world, it cannot be questioned that the child is honestly hers.

Does not the government take that child—a woman's son—and send him to war and have him killed if the necessities of the people require it?

Does Mr. Rockefeller really believe that a government may properly, legally and justly take for butchery a mother's only son, and that the government may not take a few of Mr. Rockefeller's thousand millions of dollars to pay for the battleship upon which the mother must offer up her son's life if required?

He Refuses to Believe That the Pole Has Been Discovered

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE —ON— ROCKEFELLER

Written for the Boston American.

By DR. C. H. PARKHURST

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal Examiner.

MR. ROCKEFELLER is reported to have taken sharp exception to the doctrine of an income tax. No one was probably surprised to learn that the milk of human kindness was curdled in his bosom by the touch of so sciduous a proposition. Taxes are always inconvenient.

It is proverbial to classify taxes and death together under the category of the terrible inevitables.

Not only to Standard Oil men, but to all the rest of us, the time seems to come around uncommonly often when the assessor's demands require to be met.

There is always the feeling that the amount affixed to our own name was more or less arbitrarily determined. There is, besides that, the suspicion that while we may ourselves have been frank and honest in declaring the sum total of our assets, everybody else perjured himself, so that we had to pay more than our just share in order to make good every one else's turpitude and prevarication.

"The People Have No Right to Share in the Earnings."

Probably all such considerations entered into the account with Mr. Rockefeller, but if he thought it he did not say it. What he did say, or at least what the press reports him to have said, is that, "having acquired his money honestly, the people have no right to share in the earnings resulting from that accumulation." Without making any comment on the fact that that principle rigidly applied would preclude all taxation of any kind, and leave the Government without the means of its own maintenance, it will be more to the point to remind Mr. Rockefeller that every dollar he holds is subject to popular permit.

That is the meaning of democracy. The people are the sovereign, and whatever the people in their sovereignty allow him to retain he can retain, but only by popular sufferance. So long as he remains under democratic government he, by implication, consents to be personally administered by that government, to keep only what it is its will he should keep and to surrender whatever it is its will that he should give up.

If he does not fancy that kind of government, all he has to do is to gather up his belongings and take them to some spot, if he can find one, where he will be treated more to his liking.

He and all of his ilk should have blessed to their serious consideration the fact that getting out of a monarchy or an oligarchy is not an escape from sovereignty; only in a democracy the sovereignty is not vested in Edward or in Nicholas or in Joseph, but in the people.

With us it is people that are king, and Mr. Rockefeller, so long as he remains among us, is as much bound to the popular edict by bonds of submission as though government were vested in an emperor or czar.

Our oil friend is not altogether unlike the foreigner who, on arriving at New York, commenced to throw stones at the windows, alleging in explanation that America was a free country where everybody can do as he likes and throw stones if he wants to.

This does not mean that our ingenious compatriot will realize the proposed amendment to the Constitution in case it should be adopted by the republics number of States. Nor does it mean that he will not frankly unbosom himself, or rather the amount of his income, to the constituted authorities, and lay himself a bleeding but unresisting victim upon the altar of his country's necessities.

The People Have Right to Share in His Earnings

Our only contention is that he is utterly astray when he says that the people have no right to share in his honest earnings. The people have the right to take just as much of his honest earnings, and especially of his dishonest ones, if he has any, as the people in the honest exercise of their wisdom think it for the general good to take.

Mr. Rockefeller is not a self-contained entity. He is merely a fraction. What in arithmetic is known as a vulgar fraction.

He is simply a part of the popular whole, a very conspicuous part to be sure, a part whose workings inside of the rest of the body politic have been attended with a good deal of friction and heat; but still he belongs to the people and not the people to him.

His property, so much of it as is necessary for the public good, is within the people's legitimate reach, and the people are authorized to reach out and lay hold of it, if in the honest exercise of a patriotic judgment they decide that it is more for the general advantage that the country should have more or less of it than that Mr. Rockefeller should have less or more of it.

The prime consideration is public advantage, not private interest.

Mr. Rockefeller is just one single blood corpuscle in the body politic, and the corpuscle exists for the body quite as much as the body for the corpuscle.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

WELL, said Pa, I see that a other hero has found the pole & tried to dubbel cross my old Pal Cook, with which I went to skool. I will not stand for it, Pa sed.

How are you going to help it? sed Ma. How do you know that Mister Peary didn't get there first. I am afrade, Ma sed, that you won't figger very hard in the final adjustment of the honors.

I was almost there onst myself, sed Pa, & I know the horrors of Arctic travel, & I know that Doc Cook was better abel to stand the gaff than Mister Peary, beekaus Cook is certingly a tuff guy wen it comes to standing the cold wether. Wen we used to ga skating on the coldest days, Pa sed, he never held his ears & they never froze.

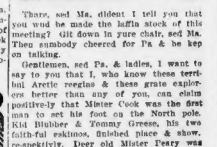
But how are you going to make peeple beleeve that? sed Ma.

I am going to start out tonite, sed Pa. I am going to a meeting over in Cambridge, ware they are going to give a lot of cheers for Mister Peary & Mister Cook both, two (2) grate Yankees. Wen they give the cheers for Mister Peary, I am going to keep still.

So Pa took Ma & me onzey to Cambridge to a meeting wich was called a Cook meeting.

Wen we got to the meeting & all the peepul had made there speeches for Mister Cook & Mr. Peary, I'n got up & sed Just a minuit, ladies & gents, we have with us tonite a man wich has known Doc Cook since childhood. We have with us a geest that knows the grate explorer for better than you will ever know him. I am that sent, Pa sed, & I wish to walk a few remarks. Git the hook, sed one man. Put him on a sledge & let four dogs drag him out, sed a other man. Turn on the Northern lites, sed a third man.

Gentlemen, gentlemen, sed Pa, I will & must be heard. I cant undo a thrilling dash for the pole, & almost got frose. Too bad, sed a man, too bad. Set down & eat sum blubber. Oh you explorer, sed a other man, & Mr Pa on the head with a gum drop. Look at Iceberg Ike, sed a other man, jest back from the frozen North.



There, sed Ma, dident I tell you that you wud be made the laffin stock of this meeting? Git down in yure chair, sed Ma. Then sumbody cheered for Pa & he kep on talking.

Gentlemen, sed Pa, & ladies, I want to say to you that I, to know these terrible Arctic reegins & these grate explorers better than any of you, can claim positive-ly that Mister Cook was the first man to set his foot on the North pole. Kid Blubber & Tommy Greese, his two faith-ful eskimos, finished piece & show, re-spectively. Deer old Mister Peary was a bad fourth.

The meeting will please cum to order, sed the chairman. Janitor, sed the chairman, will you please remove the offending spectator. If he has a wife & children with him, trest him gentel, it isent thare fault.

So Pa & Ma and me went away from the meeting, but Pa dident git sore, he jest laffed.

WHAT AILS HARRIMAN.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

A few weeks ago Mr. E. H. Harriman, feeling pretty much run down, took a trip to Europe for his health. Shortly thereafter we were told that he was under treatment by a celebrated physician, a specialist of great repute as a dietician. He was having what they called "the fattening cure," to atone for his many years of starvation! Though when at home or on the road he was sitting at table three times a day, it is doubtless true that his brain was busy all the time during meals, and his stomach was thereby cheated of a fair chance to digest the food he gun down too rapidly.

However, they got him over there, and they bathed him and stuffed him—eight meals a day, with some beer—until his stomach rebelled and he got out from under and came home with ten pounds less of Harriman than he took away, about as was predicted by at least one American dietist. He is now at home for the "after cure"; the treatment he had over there weakened him, as he, himself, says.

The moral of all this is that over-bathing is depleting, and that nutrition is a question of digesting and assimilating food enough and not of merely swallowing too much. C. E. PAGE.
